DC Delays Water Rationing

By NANCY STANCILL

After listening to the opinions of about 17 residents, the Daly City Council decided Monday night it hadn't heard or talked enough about a proposed water rationing ordinance to make a decision.

The council continued the public hearing on the ordinance proposal until May 23 and instructed City Atty. Albert Polonsky to prepare a second, alternate ordinance for consideration.

Council members unanimously requested that an ordinance setting up a per person allocation be studied, after several residents spoke in favor of such a rationing plan.

The ordinance proposal the council considered Monday night calls for a 25 per cent residential and commercial reduction in water use, based on 1976 average consumption. The ordinance proposal is similar to a model prepared by the Bay Area Water Users Association.

The council asked that Polonsky study the provision in the 25 per cent cutback ordinance which excludes from rationing the residential customers who use less than 800 cubic feet bi-monthly.

Councilman Victor Kyriakis suggested that the rationing ordinance exclude other low water users, perhaps those who use less than 1,400 cubic feet bi-monthly.

Another council suggestion dealt with consideration of lowering the minimum $7 bi-monthly charge for those water users that consume less than 800 cubic feet.

Councilman William Schumacher said he favors the Marin County system of allocating a daily gallonage per person, and Councilman Anthony Giammona concurred.

"We really have to go back to the drawing board on this ordinance," said Kyriakis. "We're not satisfied with it the way it is."

Polonsky warned that setting up a per capita rationing system may require a census and create other problems in a transient population such as Daly City has.

But a number of residents advocated a per person system over the 25 per cent cutback plan.

"A reduction on a percentage basis creates a bad taste in my mouth," John Cretal told council. "A person may have been saving or wasting in 1976. He should be treated the same as his neighbor. Daly City residents should all be treated alike."

"The only fair thing I see is a gallons per person arrangement," agreed Louis McDermott.

Jim Tucker said he concurs with a per person allocation and expressed disagreement with the 24 per cent cutback ordinance's provisions dealing with types of water use.

"If a person chooses to go without showers for a month in order to use his water to wash his car, he should be able to use a hose to do it," he said, referring to the prohibition against hosing cars.

William Wade warned against allowing differences of opinions on water use to disrupt neighborhoods.

"The water vigilantes come out fast," he said.

Councilman McRobert Stewart also expressed the opinion that the city "should be careful that we don't start an inner city battle."

He noted that people who are criticized for lawn watering "may be conserving on the inside of their homes."

City officials noted that latest water use figures showed a decrease last week of 42 per cent compared with last year's water consumption in Daly City.

However, City Manager David Rowe pointed out that a considerable amount of the water saving is municipal and through a conservation program by the school districts.

In any event, Rowe emphasized that Daly City is compelled to adopt a water rationing ordinance by July 1, since it purchases 52 per cent of its water from San Francisco.

Cable TV Has 3 Weeks to Reach Accord

Vista Grande Cablevision has another three weeks to try to come to agreement with the Daly City Council on 25 franchise conditions.

City Attorney Albert Polonsky told the council last week at a study session that he was angry because the cable television company had not responded to 25 additional conditions he has proposed to add to the city's franchise ordinance.

The council had threatened to revoke the company's franchise in January, but instead decided to try to work out its dissatisfaction with the company's operation through new ordinance additions.

Polonsky told the council Monday night that he had received earlier in the day a hand-delivered, lengthy letter from Vista Grande representatives.

Since the letter dealt with the proposed ordinance changes, Polonsky told the council, "I have no objection to continuing the matter for two weeks, and two weeks only, to go further into it with council."

Vista Grande attorney Harold Farrow, noting Polonsky's recent complaints about the slow response from Vista Grande to the city attorney's proposals, said, "perhaps I should shut up and sit down, but could we add one week to Mr. Polonsky's suggestions?"

Polonsky replied, "I'm a part-time city attorney and I've spent enough time on this matter to be a full-time city attorney.

Nevertheless, the council decided to set a special meeting May 31 at 7 p.m. to further meet with Vista Grande officials on the proposed franchise additions.

Farrow said he disagrees with many of Polonsky's suggestions, including:

- Increasing a surety bond for the remainder of the franchise to $100,000.
- Certain system monitoring procedures.
- Relocating a full service office in Daly City, unless paid for through a specifically allocated subscriber charge.

In addition, the attorney's letter noted that "the company requests that it be permitted to increase the monthly service rate in increments to the requested level on a non-discriminatory basis, as market conditions dictate."

The letter said Vista Grande is requesting a rate schedule which includes a monthly service charge of $8.25 for a primary outlet, $30 deposit for the use of a converter and $1 monthly service charge for the use of a converter.

In other action, the council:

- Approved the Environmental Impact Report (EIR), variance request and tentative subdivision map for a subdivision planned by Standard Building Co. for a Gellert Boulevard and Margate Street parcel.
- Approved on first reading an ordinance setting up the machinery for preferential parking zones, to be set up in residential areas around the BART station.
- Commended City Finance Director Robert Green and his staff for receiving the highest commendation for financial reporting recently.
- Stated its unanimous opposition to a Local Agency Formation Commission (LAFCO) proposed expansion from five to seven members to include two members from special districts.

SSF's Alternative School

By JANET PARKER

There's a wing at South San Francisco High School where students can be teachers and everyone belongs to a "family."

Physical education means anything from swinging on a trapeze to planning a weight-loss program.

And, students are familiar enough with their teachers to comfortably call them by their first names.

The 150 students are enrolled in Alternative School — the South San Francisco Unified School District's approach to offering high school boys and girls something besides a routine education.

GUIDED BY SIX teachers, the Alternative School abandons traditional class scheduling, mid-semester grades and academic basics and adopts an atmosphere of freedom and informality.

The results, says Principal George Hurley, is that a student learns to use and schedule time more wisely.

"As long as parents and students want an alternative to typical education, my philosophy is that it's our responsibility to provide one," Hurley said.

Before he became the principal of South San Francisco High, Hurley was the principal of Baden High School — the SSFUSD continuing education campus.

He went to Baden believing that continuing education is the only outlet for students who can't cope in the normal flow of high school education.

He left with the idea that perhaps continuing education campuses aren't the answer.

"Kids who were suppose to be 'a failure' were sent to us and it turned out they weren't a failure," Hurley said. While continuing education, he said, changed many students' attitudes toward education for the better, he decided that segregation from the regular high school is wrong.

There's a stigma attached, he said, to continuing education that's not attached to the concept of alternative school, where selected students remain on the regular campus to mingle with old friends at lunch, brunch and activities.

WHEN HURLEY transferred to South San Francisco High, a state plan called the Reform of Intermediate and Secondary Education (RISE) was just being introduced.

RISE established many goals for high schools and Hurley said he believed an alternative school would be one way to realize some of the goals.

In 1975, a faculty committee's proposal led to a program called "School Within a School" for tenth graders.

But, during the year, the teachers involved became aware of problems in the program. For one, they realized that the program should be completely voluntary and that instruction should be more personalized.

From that experience, Hurley explained, Alternative School emerged.

Since September, the program has been open to all three grades and all the participants are volunteers with parental permission.

If students are looking for an easy way out, the teachers would agree that

JESD Diverting Funds To Pay New Bookkeeper

The Jefferson Elementary School District Trustees Monday approved the diversion of $8,000 in federal funds from Title 1, Early Childhood Education (ECE) and Educationally Disadvantaged Youth (EDY) programs to cover the salary of a central office bookkeeper.

The bookkeeper, who will handle accounts for these programs only, is necessary to relieve what Dr. John Trompeter, district assistant superintendent, business services, describes as a tremendous load of paperwork resulting from the district's heavy involvement in federal programs.

Trompeter said he realizes this will mean diverting funds from educational services and equipment in the Title 1, ECE and EDY programs, but that the central accounting office "must have some relief." He added that a report issued following a recent audit recommends the district hire a bookkeeper for these programs.

The board also approved a request for a three per cent maximum indirect cost allowance for Title 1 and EDY programs. This allowance would cover items such as certificated personnel costs and janitorial services.

In other actions the board:

- Approved principal and vice principal assignments for 1977-78, which show no changes from current assignments.
- Approved the 1977-78 school year calendar. School will open Sept. 6, 1977 and will close on June 16, 1978. Holidays include: Sept. 5, Labor Day; Sept. 9, Admission Day; Oct. 12, Columbus Day; Nov. 11, Veterans' Day; Nov. 24 and 25, Thanksgiving Holidays; Dec. 19 to Jan. 2, winter recess; Jan. 16, Martin Luther King Day; Feb. 13, Lincoln's Birthday; Feb. 20, Washington's Birthday, March 20 to 24, spring recess; May 29, Memorial Day.
- Approved the staging of a marathon volleyball game at the Fernando Rivera School on June 3 and 4 to raise revenue for school programs and activities. The event is backed by the PTA and will be put on by the student government classes.
- Approved the attendance of Trompeter and Donald Pagani, director of certificated personnel at a California Teacher Corps seminar in Las Vegas, Nev., on May 26 and 27.

Free Clinics

A series of free immunization clinics aimed at warding off a measles outbreak in San Mateo County has been set countywide.

The clinics are designed to take care of adolescents as well as pre-schoolers, since both groups are likely not to have been properly immunized, Public Health Director Dr. James Bodie said.

Two months ago, Dr. Bodie issued a warning about a possible local measles outbreak, recommending that parents of non-immunized youngsters 15 months and older immediately contact their personal physicians or call the nearest public clinic.

Pay Boost for DC Councilmen

Daly City's City Council voted Monday night to give itself a 5 per cent raise, but not without a bit of dissension among the council members.

Mayor Pro Tem William Schumacher voted against the proposal to increase monthly compensation for council members from $337.50 to $354.37

All of the other councilmen voted for the $16.87 per month increase.

"Council perhaps deserves an increase but I think we should set an example by holding the line," Schumacher said.

Schumacher pointed out that the upcoming city budget will have to be an example in austerity and that councilmen should start close to home.

Councilman Anthony Giammona, who had made the motion for the 5 per cent increase, appeared miffed by Schumacher's action.

"In an informal session, you don't seem to see anything wrong with it," he said to Schumacher.

Councilman McRobert Stewart pointed out that the council could have taken a 20 per cent increase since it is allowed a 5 per cent yearly raise and it hasn't taken an increase since 1973.

"It is the cost of doing business that is going up," Stewart defended the increase. "I have spent quite a bit of my own money representing the city."

Purse Thief Wins Struggle

Sunday was not a good Mother's Day for a 56-year-old Daly City woman.

She was walking in the area of the 600 block of Mission Street at 2:15 p.m. when a man, about 24 or 26 years old, grabbed her purse, according to police.

The purse was strapped over her shoulder, and a battle began. She struggled and tugged. The man tugged harder and won, fleeing — with the purse and some $80 — in a foreign-made compact car, police said.

School

they don't belong in the program, he said.

The enrollment, Hurley said, is a mixture of highly motivated, college-bound students, as well as students who just really don't want to go to school or are merely putting in "seat time." They've never had anything to stimulate their interest in school and they just aren't excited about being there, he said.

"There are some kids abusing it and taking advantage of it, but there are kids in the regular program who are abusing it, too," he said. "We're wise to them."

The Alternative School classrooms are linked together by folding walls. Rather than the traditional six periods of school a day, for a semester at a time, students enroll in four and five week blocks — up to eight classes at a time.

FOREIGN LANGUAGE, business, shop, art and music aren't offered, so some students attend classes outside their miniature school a few hours a day. But, the classes that are offered are frequently unusual for high school students — courses like "Shakespeare," "Dissent and Protest," "Human Sexuality," and "Economics of Urban Growth."

Hurley, the teachers and the students acknowledge that Alternative School has its critics. One teacher who is not in the program noted that some of his colleagues regard Alternative School as a threat. It's a "fear of the unknown," he said, and a lack of communication about the function of the program may be at fault.

And he added, there are simply some teachers and parents who believe the latitude of freedom is wrong for high school students.

Randy Bianchi, a junior, says Alternative School is designed for "mature, ready-to-work, devoted students." At the same time, students with the opposite traits wouldn't fit in, he said.

"We have those kinds of students and they have been kicked out," Bianchi said. "This seems lax and easy to many people but it's structured in its own way."

"You can take advantage of the freedom — which many students do — or you can use it to its fullest — which many students do," he said. Those who have taken advantage of the system, he said, usually have been sent back to a regular classroom sometimes by their own choice.

Another student, Kim Marcus, said he and classmates have run into problems with some teachers outside Alternative School who resent the program and don't always cooperate with a student's request to go on an Alternative School field trip.

"IT'S SOMETHING new and people have a tendency to fear anything new," the senior said. But most of the students who aren't in regular school are envious, he said. They wish they, too, could be in Alternative School.

The students are divided into several "families," which meet twice weekly in a kind-of-counseling session, Hurley said. It's one of the means used to tighten the relationship between students and teachers.

The school also has a 13-member Student Advisory Committee, which guides the school's direction. Recently, said teacher Linda Bishop, the committee helped teachers decide which students aren't right for the program since enrollment must be reduced for next fall.

"This is not for all students," Ms. Bishop said. "With freedom comes responsibility, of course. That's why many don't want the freedom — they don't want the responsibility."

Ms. Bishop decided she wanted to teach English in the school because many things were occurring in the traditional classroom that she didn't like — but most of all that learning just wasn't exciting for most students.

"It bothered me to see students sitting passively in class — learning, but only because they were being told to learn," she said.

Another teacher, Jerry Lewis, said he wasn't stimulated by teaching in a regular classroom — and if teachers aren't stimulated, students won't be either.

"There are teachers who are very much against anything that goes on outside four walls," Lewis said. The social science teacher, however, has found it an opportunity to teach things as varied as calligraphy and first aid.

ALTERNATIVE School does provide a greater freedom than regular classes — but students can use that freedom to their advantage or disadvantage, Lewis said.

One of his classes is studying the economic structure of South San Francisco, comparing it to nearby cities that have major shopping center.

Before the March election, he had a class on election issues and another on the candidates.

A most unique aspect of the school is physical education where students — if they choose — can sign a contract to attain any goal they desire. The only requirement is that each student complete at least 200 minutes of physical education a week — either during or after school.

Teacher Irene Lee has been supervising bicyclers, roller skaters, ice skaters, dancers, weight lifters and joggers.

Randy Bianchi signed a contract to perfect his talents on the trapeze. Another student's contract committed her to perfect her Frisbee throwing, using a 20-yard accuracy test as a gauge.

One aspect of the program that has particularly lured students is the chance to instruct a class.

Kim Marcus was fascinated by a book called "Desert Solitaire" — a study of Indians native to the Utah area. He turned the book into a course, which he has been instructing with a teacher, and this month 12 students will travel to Utah and Arizona to study the areas they read about.

Another student, Dean Mealing, was a fishing enthusiast and he's conducting an elementary fishing class for 10 students to fulfill their physical education reauirement.

HURLEY SAID he's going to ask the Board of Trustees for permission to change the Alternative School next year so that students needn't take physical education, so that they can leave campus in their own cars for independent study and so that personnel other than teachers can instruct classes or demonstrate their expertise in a field.

"We're not saying regular school is wrong," Hurley said. "We're saying that regular school is not for every student."

Ms. Bishop said there's no doubt that Alternative School is not for every student — although it's designed for the majority of students.

"We, by no means, think the entire school should be the way we are," she said.

'Smoke Eater' Solution

San Bruno Councilman Tony Governale has agreed to at least temporarily stop smoking in the council chambers if his colleagues will consider the installation of air conditioning.

Governale said Monday night he plans to show the City Council information about "smoke eaters" — machines that could suck up cigarette and cigar smoke during meetings.

The council flatly refused Governale's request to reinstate a smoking section in the council chambers — the last two rows of the audience — and to allow the council and staff members to smoke during meetings.

The smoking issue that was dormant in San Bruno for nearly two years was unexpectedly revived last month.

Councilman Dick Griffith had asked that the ban on smoking in the council chambers — approved over Governale's objections in 1975 — be extended to include meetings in the conference rooms.

Governale, the lone smoker on the council, had caused an uproar when the measure was proposed two years ago. He erupted in anger at Griffith's more recent suggestion, claiming his own rights are being trampled.

"I'm going to light up as soon as that motion passes," Governale said. And he did.

During Monday night's meeting, Governale waited until meeting breaks to light up a cigarette outside the chambers.

However, at the end of the meeting, he offered the compromise — a council chamber smoking area along with the right of the staff and council to smoke.

Those individuals, he said, have to be in the meeting room for hours and should be permitted to smoke.

"I don't like being made a continual fool of," Governale said. He referred to the laughter and ridicule of members of the audience every time he requests a smoking break during council meetings, sometimes three breaks a night.

He said the council went "a step too far" in extending its ban to meetings outside the chambers, a ban that some council members said has always existed.

If the council would agree to his proposal, he will cease smoking in the smaller meeting rooms, he said.

Water Authorities Pursue 'Rustlers'

Now it's water rustling.

California Water Service Co. District Manager B.F. "Barney" Tumey today confirmed a report that instances of water rustling are occurring in San Mateo County.

"We are doing everything we can to catch up to people," he said. "Wherever anyone sees a water hydrant turned on without a meter attached to a short section of fire hose, it is in violation of regulations."

Tumey said in cases where violators have been tracked down, the water company sends a letter informing the violator that the act is subject to a $250 levy, the deposit required for a permit to use hydrant water. Persistent violation can result in court action. Taking water without authorization from the hydrant, which is owned by the water company, constitutes theft, he noted.

The company official said that all outstanding permits are being reviewed in light of the water shortage.

"Permits for car washing are not being issued," he said.

In one case, residents in the vicinity of Nineteenth Avenue and Grant Street complained to The Times Thursday that someone had attached a hose to a fire hydrant and was washing cars parked under the 19th Avenue Freeway.

Both Tumey and Fire Chief Arthur Koron said a permit had been issued to Bill's Portable Washing, Inc., of Pleasanton a year ago, when there was no serious concern about the drought. That permit, however, is being revoked, Tumey said.

He added that the drought is having a serious impact on such firms as the car washing contracting business.

Recently, California Water Service Co. sent a letter to Koron and all fire departments asking for help in curbing water rustling.

The letter points out, "The continuing drought is resulting in an increased incident of stolen water from fire hydrants. The legitimate use of fire hydrants for construction water is being reviewed and standardized to provide adequate public protection."

Child Care Project Awarded to SM County

By MICHELLE CARTER

A solution to the financial crunch which has limited the help San Mateo County's children's services agency has been able to provide may be at hand.

The state Department of Health has named San Mateo County as one of two demonstration counties that will participate in a four-year program designed to see if increased and intensive in-home support services for the families of abused and neglected children will actually reduce the number of children who are floating in long-term and indefinite foster care.

The demonstration project was set up by the Family Protection Act (SB30), a bill introduced by State Sen. Arlen Gregorio, D-Menlo Park, and passed and signed into law last year.

In accordance with the act, the state will provide $704,000 for the implementation of the project as long as San Mateo county puts up a matching 10 per cent the first year, 20 per cent the second and 33 1-3 the third and fourth years.

The final decision on the county's participation rests with the county Board of Supervisors which will consider the matter on Tuesday.

The board will not be asked to allocate additional funds to make up the $70,000 which is the county's contribution to the project, according to Cynthia McKenna, children's services director for the county Department of Health and Welfare.

"We are not asking for additional funds, but rather a transfer of the $70,000 from the foster care budget (for the 1977-78 fiscal year)."

In his letter to the board recommending approval of the project, Dr. George Pickett, county director of health and welfare, said he expects "that the number of children in out-of-home care will be reduced by 20 during the 12-month period."

If that is the case, the countywill save $83,000, more than enough to cover the 10 per cent matching funds for the project.

Mrs. McKenna expects the savings to the county to grow proportionately with the increased financial participation of the county in the project.

"If the program is successful, we will have cut down our budget enough so we wouldn't need that money. If not, then the theory (behind the project) doesn't work — which I don't go along with at all.

Among the most significant effects of the project in the county will be the establishment of 24-hour protective services for children which were mandated by the state in 1971 but have never been provided in San Mateo County; an increase in the number of social workers in protective and dependent children's services, and the institution or upgrading of homemaker, respite care, day care and other services — some of which will be contracted out to private agencies, according to Mrs. McKenna.

"The thrust of the bill is to maintain families in their own home, to provide the kind of services a family may need to stay together whether it's day care or homemaker services or whatever," she said.

"The bill will allow only a small increase in social workers, perhaps a supervisor and four or five workers, since only 20 per cent of the funding can be for staff."

Mrs. McKenna explained that the project also should reduce the number of 11- to 17-year-olds now in temporary shelter care — and it may result, she said, in eliminating the need for maintaining two separate facilities which would represent a sizeable savings to the county.

Besides creating the demonstration project in San Mateo (and Shasta) County, the Family Protection Act also sets up much tougher and more objective standards for removing the child from the home in the first place.

The bill provides for six-month reviews of all dependency cases (where children have been placed outside the home), at which time the court must review the progress made by the family to reunite, what services have been provided, the effectiveness of such services and the need for additional services.

If the child remains out of the home for 18 months (12 months for children under 2 and over 14), the court must investigate the opportunities for finding adoptive parents, legal guardians or a stable long-term foster care placement for the child.

The appropriate county department has up to six months to make its investigation and to report to the court.

Stepped-up Program to Curb Alcoholics

A stepped-up program on alcoholism in San Mateo County is being waged by the San Mateo Information Center of the National Council on Alcoholism, 231 Second Ave., San Mateo.

The director, Denise Baccala, said today that a third staff member, Lois Almen, would begin next week to visit schools from the elementary to the community college level in passing out information on alcoholism.

There are estimated to be 28,000 alcoholics in San Mateo County and studies have shown that students are turning to booze at an early age.

The Center is affiliated with the National Council on Alcoholism-Bay Area with chapters in Alameda, Contra Costa, Marin, San Francisco and San Mateo Counties.

These centers offer the following services on a no-fee basis to individuals, agencies, groups, institutions, corporations and others:

1—Direct service to the alcoholic, problem drinker and co-alcoholic (husband, wife or other family member adversely affected), consisting of pre-treatment counseling, knowledgeable referral to the appropriate resources; information and literature for professional people, students and others interested in the subject of alcoholism or problem drinking.

2 — Alcoholism in-service training programs.

3 — Labor-management consultation for employers and-or unions to assist in the development of employe alcoholism and drug abuse control programs.

4 — Information programs including speakers and films for interested groups.

5 — Conduct of a Court School primarily for court referred drunken driving offenders.

The funding for the program comes from the county.

In addition to Ms. Almen and Ms. Baccala the Center employs George Mora, who is involved with labor-management programs.

"We try to get unions involved as well as managment in working with an individual with a drinking problem at work," said Mora. "With about 7 per cent of the work force alcoholics we estimate that San Mateo County employers lose about $37 million every year in lost time.

"We hope to get the alcoholics into regular group and individual sessions to help them. We find that most workers will respond when they know that their jobs are on the line."

Ms. Baccala feels that alcoholism is a disease and it is treatable. "We found that our programs can reduce recidivism (a return to drinking) by 100 per cent."

She agrees with Alcoholics Anonymous that the heavy drinker must eliminate all consumption of spirits.

She points out that in San Mateo County in 1974 there were 8,552 alcohol-related arrests.

She is quick to stress what the impact of alcoholism is on San Mateo government.

The following public agencies have estimated what proportion of their clients have been significantly affected by an alcohol problem.

- Community Mental Health Centers — adult and adolescent services, 20-30 per cent.
- Social Services for children, 50 per cent.
- Chope Hospital — general medicine, 60 per cent; emergency room, 50 per cent; inpatient psychiatric, 10 per cent.
- Probation — drunk driving cases only, 23 per cent; all cases, 60 per cent
- District Attorney — drunk driving cases only, 33 per cent; all cases, 66 per cent.

Ms. Baccala argues that in order to maintain the existing programs county support must increase from the present $55,000 to more than $300,000. The Citizens for Alcohol Action are advocating a budget adding four new treatment programs which would require a total of $724,000 in county funds. The Citizens is an advisory group which supports the program.

Teachers Air Grievances Before LSSD Board

A wave of protests rocked the Laguna Salada Union School District Board of Trustees' meeting Thursday as disillusioned teachers lashed out at the trustees for the delay in reaching a salary settlement and disturbed parents described deleterious conditions at Fairmont School.

The district teachers, who have been working without a contract for the past year and who claim not to have received a cost of living increase for at least the past two years, took turns telling the trustees what they think of the district's attitude toward teachers.

Kay Sweeney, Laguna Salada Education Association president, took the lead, saying, "We (the teachers) are baffled by the board's refusal to negotiate on salaries. The board presented its initial proposal and we presented a compromise counter proposal. (This took place in January and February of this year, according to Marv Morganti, assistant superintendent of instruction services). The teachers are frustrated and angry. We feel you are not getting our message."

Mrs. Sweeney said the teachers will continue to demonstrate "until the board starts to listen to us."

Banners hung from the wall. The inscription "Solidarity." Two teachers marched with placards reading, "Support the greening of the teachers." Green armbands were wrapped around teachers' and parents' arms.

"We have not heard or seen that the board is concerned about teachers," accused Karen Facekos, a teacher at Linda Mar School. "The teachers of this district are devoted to producing quality education, but we are beginning to get tired," she added. "Without a salary increase, I can say the tires will all go flat on this car."

Joanna Adams, a 14-year veteran of the district teaching staff, told the trustees, "Laguna Salada School District teachers have accepted being the poorest paid in the area because we are in one of the lowest wealth districts in the area. However, we find that our district superintendent earns $38,000 a year — one of the highest paid school administrators in California."

She added that "teachers have subsidized education in this district long enough. Teacher morale is at a very low ebb. Teachers are hurt. They are disgusted. If our board shows that they do not care about the teachers by refusing a salary increase, then the board is also saying that they do not care about the children in this district. For, without a raise to boost teachers' morale, our classrooms could become very dreary, sad places."

Teacher Judy Sartor informed the board she was glad she had the night off from her "other job" to come to the meeting. With increasing agitation, Miss Sartor told the trustees, "It is impossible to live on my salary and I am a single person who has worked five years in this district. I just do not know how those with families to support do it. I am tired of the public thinking I have nothing on my mind and loads of spare time. I work all day Saturday and nights to supplement my teaching income. I feel guilty when I cannot correct papers in the evening because I am too tired. I put many extra hours and many extra dollars into my profession. I am telling you here tonight that I do not have anything more to give if you do not give something in return."

Mike Clark, also a district teacher, stated, "It is not a question of looking for money. I am tired of working on Saturday to keep my car in operating condition."

A retired district teacher, Maxine Jones, told the trustees, "It is humiliating when support services (district administrators) are considered a higher priority than teachers. No raise for these teachers means a cut in salary. Some have had to cut corners to survive. Teaching is a profession. Please treat it as one."

"This is the first time I have felt like quitting teaching," admitted Cliff Roberts. He said he had felt he could trust the board to come up with an acceptable contract, even if it meant waiting a year. But, time is racing by and still we have no contract."

Resident Pat Brown told the Board, "I work as a parent volunteer in the schools. When I see what our teachers have to put up with, I know I would not want to change places with them for anything. They deserve a raise."

Added another parent, "What I have heard tonight is appalling. I will work to get other parents behind me in support of the teachers. I hope you have heard what they are telling you."

Parents disturbed over disciplinary problems at Fairmont School (a kindergarten through eighth grade) drew a vivid picture of what they attribute as acute administrative problems.

"I am disgusted with the reputation of the school," said resident Diane Caulley. "The bathrooms are unsafe for the children. Halls are messy and disorderly. There is a lack of respect for authority. I am asking for a return of order to the classrooms so an atmosphere which is conductive to learning can be created. And, I am sure that I speak for most parents, I want a return to positive, fair and effectual administration."

Resident Maureen Cuneo cited unhealthy, dangerous conditions which have recently prompted her daughter to beg not to be sent to school. "Bodily harm, extortion, urinating in the water fountains and smoking pot are just some of the problems at Fairmont," added Mrs. Cuneo.

Resident Lynette Gibson told the trustees, "The teachers are unhappy at our school. They spend their instructional time dealing with anti-social kids. We are discouraged by the bureaucracy that makes it difficult to remove disruptive students from the classroom.

"There is no teacher willing to take on the sixth grade in the A wing of the school," added Mrs. Gibson. "To much time and teacher energy are expended coping with behavior problems."

Fairmont is one of the two district schools for which a principal has not yet been designated.

A special meeting will be held on May 11 at 7:30 p.m. in the Fairmont library to discuss discipline and behavior conditions at Fairmont.

In other business the board:

- Appointed a citizens committee to study the Structured School Concept that places the emphasis on back to basics type learning. Twenty-two residents and five staff members will serve on the committee.
- Approved a Public Law 94-142 application, indicating the district's intent to participate with the county office of education in fulfilling its responsibility to serve handicapped children who are not being served or who are being inadequately served.
- Approved a contract with RMA Group to develop plans for selling the Edgemar site and the FairmonNo. 3 unused school sites. The cost for this service is $5,800.
- Approved an extension of the lease of 10 classrooms at Portola School to the Church of the Highlands from Aug. 1, 1977 to July 31, 1978 in the amount of $25,000.
- Approved the extension of the lease of one classroom at Westview School to the Economic Opportunity Commission from Sept. 1, 1977 to May 31 31, 1978 in the amount of $800.
- Placed eight district teachers — Naomi Izumizaki, Maxine Bailey, Judy Balago, Rosanna Myres, Florine Gallegos, Patricia McNally, Ann Boland and Sandra Sutter — on notice that their services will be terminated effective June 17, 1977. However, Dr. Lucille Foster, district personnel director, said the district anticipates several retirements. "It looks hopeful," she added, "that we will have these teachers back with us next year."
- Agreed to inform the instructional aides that there will be two less positions available for the 1977-78 school year.

'We Have Not Heard Or Seen That The Board Is Concerned About Teachers'

Van, Compact Collide

Two El Granada drivers were injured Monday afternoon when a van truck collided with a compact car in El Granada. The van dragged the smaller vehicle 100 feet before the car finally came loose and spun completely around, knocking down a street sign, the California Highway Patrol reported.

According to Officer Dale Elkins, the accident occurred at the intersection of Columbus Street and Sonora Avenue.

Drivers James Michael Magistro of 806 Valencia Ave., and Faye LeRae Pellerite, 33, of 614 Ferdinand Ave., were taken to Moss Beach Rehabilitation Hospital for treatment.

Maurice Marvin Phillips, 37, of San Francisco, suffered a fractured wrist and numerous lacerations when his motorcycle hit a rock on Canada Road, causing him to lose control.

Finance Director Honored

C. Robert Green, Daly City's Director of Finance, was presented on May 9 with a certificate of conformance and an award for financial reporting achievements by the City Council.

The city was awarded a certificate of conformance, the highest form of recognition in the area of governmental accounting and financial reporting, by the Municipal Finance Officers Association of the United States and Canada.

Unfair Practices Charge Dismissed

An unfair practices charge filed by the San Bruno Federation of Teachers against school Supt. William Jennings last November has been dismissed by the state board which governs collective bargaining procedures.

The Educational Employment Relations Board (EERB) has ruled that the teachers' organization, a chapter of the American Federation of Teachers, failed to show how Jennings violated any state code.

The EERB gave the AFT 10 days to amend its complaint against Jennings and to seek another ruling, but chapter president Mary Dunn-Bury said the organization decided not to pursue the issue any further.

The AFT is the minority teachers union in the San Bruno Park School District.

Charges were filed last November with EERB after Jennings allegedly made statements regarding the AFT at a faculty meeting at Parkside School.

At the time, according to Associate Supt. Bob Rottman, the AFT was challenging the local branch of the California Teachers Association for exclusive representation of the district's teachers.

The AFT had rejected the conditions of a consent election that would have allowed teachers to determine in the spring last year which union would represent them at the bargaining table.

AFT leaders said that at the Parkside faculty meeting in the fall, Jennings said, "We are not the ones who are stalling this election."

The superintendent implied, they claimed, that AFT was holding up the process.

Soon after, the AFT filed charges with EERB accusing the superintendent of unfair practices.

The membership sought a cease and desist order and asked the district to respond to the charges.

Rottman said the district responded that Jennings did not use the word "stalling" and that attendance at the faculty meeting during the time Jennings was speaking was not mandatory, as the AFT had alleged.

The EERB ruled that the superintendent's statements were "merely an expression of opinion" and that they did not constitute threats of reprisals.

Jennings' remarks, EERB ruled, were "constitutionally protected."

DC Lions Cancel Fireworks

Daly City Host Lions Club has canceled its annual fireworks sale due to the area's drought conditions and fire danger.

The fireworks sale, held shortly before July 4 at a stand in the Bayshore area near the Cow Palace, has been the traditional money-making project of the civic club.

According to committee chairman Sam Chandler, the club has notified Daly City officials that it won't be using the fireworks permit it had been issued earlier.

Chandler said the club voted last week to cancel the project after hearing the recommendations of the San Mateo County fire chiefs.

The fire chiefs' report urged that cities to cancel fireworks sales because of the blazes fireworks generate and the resulting heavy water use to extinguish the fires.

Daly City's City Council did not act on the proposed ban because, councilmen noted, permits had already been issued for the year to civic organizations.

Chandler said the club has been selling fireworks for about 15 years and the annual sale usually nets about $3,000.

The proceeds go for the Lions' projects to aid the blind, youth projects and Operation Santa Claus.

Student Volunteers Lend Helping Hand

College students are gaining valuable work experience, earning college class credit and, at the same time, lending a helping hand to community agencies in a unique program sponsored by the Voluntary Action Center and the San Mateo County Community College District.

Initiated last September by Marjorie Bolton, executive director of the Volunteer Bureau of San Mateo County, the program has placed approximately 80 students from three college campuses into a number of non-profit community based services agencies.

"The College Volunteer Program is designed to get students involved in community volunteer work by matching their needs with the needs of agencies," said Mrs. Bolton. "Students volunteer for a number of reasons: to gain work experience or to complete class requirements for field study; to explore vocational interests or just because they want to be able to help someone."

If one chooses, students can receive up to four units of college credit for their work through the Cooperative Education Programs at the colleges.

Joan Sobol, project director, acts as a liaison between interested students on the campuses and community agencies which need volunteers. She spends two mornings a week at College of San Mateo and one morning at each of the two other colleges in the District: Canada College in Redwood City and Skyline College in San Bruno. She is assisted by students who staff the college bureaus from 20 to 30 hours per week.

Ms. Sobol receives requests for volunteers from community agencies and screens interested students for placement. She also makes an intensive effort to keep college faculty and counselors informed about the program and volunteer opportunities.

After interviewing students to find out about their particular interests and goals, Ms. Sobol searches through a file of requests from community agencies to find just the right assignment for the student. If she doesn't have a request on file which fits the student's needs, she will contact several agencies to ask if they are interested in "employing" a volunteer. Once a referral is made to an agency, the student is responsible for further exploring the possibilities for placement and for determining whether or not the assignment fits his or her needs. The student also arranges work hours, job responsibilities and other details directly with the agency.

Thus far, students have been placed in volunteer positions in hospitals, recreation centers, consumer action agencies and the probation department. Other students volunteer in Crisis Intervention Centers, at the Humane Society and in schools throughout the county.

Ms. Sobol checks back with students approximately two weeks after an assignment has begun to make sure that all is going well. At the end of each semester, the students and the agencies fill out questionnaires evaluating their experiences.

The response to the program at the colleges has been great, according to Ms. Sobol. "Teachers and students are very enthusiastic, which is the major reason for the program's success," she said.

League Seeking Staffer

The Annti-Crime League of Daly City, launched under the aegis of four neighborhood organizations on March 20, is now looking for someone to staff the office when the expected federal grant comes through on July 1, said Frank Karavos, chairman of the league.

Blocks already have been organized for crime protection with "seeing eye" seals put up in windows, along with no soliciting signs and cameras. This has a "deterrent effect," said Chairman Karavos. However, the principal methods of controlling robbery and other crimes, he emphasized, are the ID program of engraving valuables with the driver's license, and the reward program.

The thrust of the program is carried on by concerned citizens on each block who act as block wardens in helping their neighbors to identify their valuables, but especially in training them to be watchful of other houses on the block.

This program has been effective for some time in the Lincoln Park area of Daly City in the Crocker Neighborhood, said Karavos. He keeps a weekly chart of crimes supplied by police reports, and claims that not one member displaying the seal has been "hit."

The person who keeps the office will be expected to enter names and addresses of new members, chart new areas for organization, do some light typing and handling of materials, according to Karavos.

He said it will offer some valuable training in basic office skills and the chance to learn anti-crime work and organizing. The pay will be small, hardly more than the legal minimum, but it would be for a student or trainee. The federally funded program is for one year.

Anyone interested should contact Conrad Pavellas, co-chairman, at 62 Theta Ave., Daly City; phone 756-8192.

The organizations in the league are Crocker Neighborhood Association, original Daly City Protective Association, Southern Hills Homeowners Association and Bayshore Residents Association.

Elderly Are Aim of Alcohol Workshops

A county-wide program designed to educate and assist senior citizens with alcohol-related problems has been launched in San Mateo County.

One of the first in the state, the program has three objectives: alcohol awareness training for people who work with the elderly; alcohol consciousness training for the seniors themselves, and an information and referral service to provide pre-treatment counseling and personal attention for those with alcohol-related problems.

Six-hour staff workshops will be conducted in the North County on the topics of "Alcohol Use and Misuse in Today's Society," "Alcoholism: What It Is and Is Not" and "Alcohol and the Elderly." They will be held June 14 at the South San Francisco Senior Center, June 21 at the Pacifica Senior Center and June 28 at the Community Service Center, Daly City.

According to Don Light, alcohol services administrator for San Mateo County, the program has been instituted because "while seniors are among the least visible of the problem drinkers, their specific needs and problems are too often not met in the regular channels of alcoholism services. Because of age, a senior may be excluded from alcoholism services, while because of alcoholism, he may be excluded from old age services."

The ultimate goal of the Alcohol Outreach Program is to education staffs and seniors, and to establish a county care co-ordinator, or ombudsman, who can give direct personal assistance and intervention to refer seniors to the appropriate treatment programs.

The program is being co-ordinated at Little House, 800 Middle Ave., Menlo Park. The outreach co-ordinator, Elinor Colburn, former county coordinator of the San Mateo County Council on Alcoholism, with 15 years experience in the field, can be reached there at 326-2025, and will be available for counseling Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoons from 2 until 4 p.m.

Workshops are open to anyone in San Mateo County who works directly with seniors either as a professional or a volunteer. Further information may be obtained by calling the Alcohol Outreach Program at Little House.

Westlake Picnic

On May 15 the Westlake School PTA is sponsoring a picnic at Blackberry Farm, 22100 Stevens Creek Blvd. in Monte Vista from 9 p.m. until the farm closes.

Tickets at $1.75 for adults and $1.30 for children may be purchased in the Westlake School multi-use room on May 13 during lunch hour or by calling the school at 992-1000, ext. 337.

Many Westlake faculty members will attend, including Principal Robert Mannini. There will be games, swimming and baseball. Barbecue pits are available.

Running Seminar

On May 15 thousands of runners will descend on San Francisco to compete in the Bay to Breakers race. Now there is a chance for runners to get together and "tune-up" at a day-long seminar devoted entirely to running. Serious runners can hear 11 Bay Area athletes and Sports Medicine doctors present lectures and participate in discussions on the joys and problems devoted runners face.

The program will be held on May 14 at the California College of Podiatric Medicine. Topics will range from "Training for Ultra Events" to "Women's Running" to "I Get My Thrill on Hayes Street Hill." Included in the registration is a free foot health screening for athletes at the Sports Medicine Clinic.

All high schools were invited to enter their top secretarial students who would be graduating in June with the intent of pursuing secretarial studies in college in preparation for a business career.

Miss Strazzullo will enter Skyline Junior College in the fall.

Samuel Chandler

Across my desk an old friend came, Searson and Martin's "Fifth Grade Reader," with a copyright date of 1920. In a moment I was wafted through the years to an age where teachers used selections from the world's most lovely literature to teach reading and elocution and something that Maeser called "the cultivation of the dignity of the spirit."

As I read I was overcome with the beauty of the lines in the various selections and with the purity of the thoughts of the various authors. Here was Aesop with a brevity of words teaching lessons of social living through his fables, "The Lame Man and the Blind Man," "The Arab and His Camel" and "The Shepherd Boy Who Cried Wolf! Wolf!"

I met again a poet who has thrilled me over and over with his ability to reach the folk strings of our nation, John Greenleaf Whittier. In his "King Solomon and the Ants," he took a story that he found in the Koran and wove it into lives that speak to our day's chatter of low class, middle class and high class Americans.

IN THE STORY, King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba are pictured riding in great splendor through the Syrian sun until the King Solomon, who "could understand the languages of all/The creatures great or small/That trod the earth or flew," hears a group of ants say, "Here comes the king men greet/As wise and good and just,/To crush us in the dust/Under his heedless feet."

After being informed that the lowly ants have protested, the haughty queen says to Solomon, "To happy fate have they/Who perish in thy way/Beneath thy gracious feet." But Solomon had learned a truth from the fear that the ants had expressed and says, "Happy must be the state/Whose ruler heedeth more/the murmurs of the poor/than flatteries of the great."

Of this lesson the editors of the "Searson and Martin's Fifth Reader" told their students that Solomon had learned a great truth. That the wise and strong who achieve true greatness seek the welfare of the weak. Thus they call it the lesson of justice and mercy.

THE DIGNITY of man and the beauty of the English language shine through all the pages of Searson and Martin's ancient reader. Here is Mary Krouts' "Little Brown Hands," which ends with these homey lines:

Those who toil bravely are strongest;
The humble and poor became great;
And so from these brown-handed children
Shall grow mighty rulers of state.
The pen of the author and statesman,
The noble and wise of the land,
The sword and the chisel and palette,
Shall be held in the little brown hand.

I shudder to think that there are children in today's schools who learn the intricacies of sex education and about the world's complex social problems, but don't learn the simple truths that Longfellow, Whittier, Rielly and many others taught with beautiful words and phrases.

ALONG WITH reading and elocution, J. W. Searson and Gearge E. Martin sought to teach the truth from Lodge's "Heracles":

The soul of man can never be enslaved
Save by its own infirmities, nor freed
Save by its very strength and own resolve
And constant vision and supreme endeavor.

Let us hope that some of the members of the committees that write today's readers have studied Searson and Martin's ancient books.

Teachers Continue Substitute Fund Quest

A parade of teachers appeared before the Jefferson Union High School District Board of Trustees May 3 to request that the district's depleted substitute fund be replenished for the remainder of the year.

About 14 teachers spoke to protest the district action which resulted in a $7,262 expenditure from the budgeted substitute fund. The expenditure was used to cover the cost of substitutes for teachers participating in contract negotiations.

Marcy Ballard, president of the American Federation of Teachers Local 1481, said the district had given its word that teachers' release time costs would not come out of the substitute fund.

Mrs. Ballard, who had protested the action several weeks ago at a board meeting, noted that the AFT has taken the matter to the district superintendent, Dr. Floyd Gonella, as a grievance.

Gonella recommended to the board that restoration of the disputed funds be denied, but said that a related request, that administrators be required to substitute along with classroom teachers, has been put into effect. The board went along with Gonella's recommendation.

District officials have said they made no commitment that release time costs would not be paid from the substitute fund, though Mrs. Ballard read an AFT memorandum that indicated she understood in December that the matter had been settled.

The teachers pointed out that the result of the substitute fund shortfall is that classroom teachers are losing preparation time because they often must substitute during their "prep period."

"During the last four days, I have substituted three times during my preparation period," Bob Brandi, a Jefferson High teacher reported. "I am considering canceling a field trip for one of my classes because my fellow teachers would have to undergo the same hardship."

Mary Stuart noted that as an English teacher, "I have to correct 120 to 140 student essays a week. I need the preparation time that I've had to use to substitute."

Teachers noted that though the disputed $7,262 expenditure helped to deplete the substitute fund as early as March, it usually has not lasted through the school year.

"I am protesting what I feel is an indefensible procedure," said Alex Fraser. "The budget in recent years has been underfunded. This year it has happened again."

Mrs. Stuart added that "if the bus driver fund ran out, you would find some way to get the money for it. You expect us to do a good job for 75 per cent of the year and then wing it for the other 25 per cent. You shouldn't budget a category at 75 per cent."

At the end of the lengthy list of teacher speakers, board member James Roman asked district officials to study the policy of asking classroom teachers to substitute if funds run out.

"It appears to be an unsound educational practice," he said.

Gonella said the next step in the contract-mandated grievance procedure would be for the teachers to take the matter formally to the board of trustees.

In other business, the board approved a letter to be sent to the San Mateo County Board of Education requesting consideration of establishing a Regional Occupational Programs Center in the North County area.

"This request of the board is necessitated by the prior denials of such programs by the Office of the County Superintendent of Schools and the present Regional Occupational Programs Center over the past few years," the letter noted.

Officials said at least 95 students have requested an opportunity for welding instruction, one of the most popular aspects of a Regional Occupational Program.

Traffic Referee's Different Interpretation

Traffic Referee Eyes Speed Controls

North County Court Traffic Referee Joseph Gruber says his interpretation of laws permitting the use of radar for speed control is different than that of San Bruno officials.

Gruber, who serves as the judge for traffic cases in the North County Municipal Court, said he doesn't believe a city must strictly adhere to the results of a street speed survey in utilizing radar.

However, Gruber, an attorney, turned down the city's request to inspect the traffic conditions on a San Bruno street that has stirred up a controversy.

He was scheduled to tour the street with Police Capt. Frank Hedley last Friday but decided not to get involved in the local issue at this time, he said.

More than 700 San Bruno residents have signed a petition asking that the speed limit on Crestmoor Drive be reduced.

Recently, the Engineering Department posted 35-mile-an-hour speed limit signs on the street, which winds through a residential area and past two elementary schools.

City officials said speed surveys showed that 85 per cent of the drivers who use Crestmoor Drive are traveling at 35 miles an hour or less.

They said state laws require that the city post the 35 mile-an-hour speed on the street.

The speed at which 85 per cent of the cars are traveling is considered a "safe and reasonable" speed for any particular street, they said.

However, residents were infuriated. They claim the new speed limit — an increase of 10 miles an hour — endangers the lives of people who live on that street and of children going to and from school.

They protested at a Traffic Safety Committee meeting and at a City Council meeting.

The Traffic Safety Committee is scheduled to re-evaluate the decision at 8 p.m. today and the City Council will make a final determination on Monday night.

The city staff had hoped that Gruber could recommend a safe speed for that particular street or at least inform the city if the newly posted speed is appropriate.

Gruber said he didn't want to pre-judge the conditions in that area before the issue comes to him in court.

If an individual receives a ticket and protests in court that the posted speed is too low, he will investigate.

Then, he said, he may determine that the speed actually is too high or too low.

"My view is that even if the speed survey shows that 35 is the speed most vehicles are going, the city doesn't necessarily have to use that as a basis for writing speed citations," Gruber said.

Gruber added that special conditions on a street — including fog or any other variable weather condition — would be a factor in determining if a speed is appropriate.

The referee said he didn't want to give the city any advice at this time about how to handle the situation. And, he said, he didn't want to react on the basis of pressure from San Bruno residents.

Gruber also said the district attorney has determined that when radar is used to apprehend speeders, the police department must submit its street traffic survey with the citation to the court.

The city, he said, has interpreted that to mean that the city must strictly adhere to the results of the survey.

Gruber said, in his opinion, the application of the survey results can be more flexible.

San Bruno Holds Up Paramedic Decision

By JANET PARKER

It will be several more months before San Bruno residents will know whether an additional tax will be levied for a fire fighter-paramedic program in the city.

The City Council voted recently to again delay a decision on whether San Bruno needs and wants its own paramedic force, apart from one already provided by the county.

It was the third time the council has postponed action on the controversial proposal.

The council voted 3-1 to set aside the proposal until the 1977-78 preliminary fire department budget is evaluated in a public hearing.

Then, council members said, they can decide if the city can afford the project and if taxpayers can afford the additional tax.

Voting against the motion was Councilman Tony Governale who said the council should postpone any vote at all until Mayor Gary Mondfrans could be present to participate. Mondfrans was unable to attend the special meeting on Monday night.

Even one of the councilmen who originally recommended a local-based paramedic program indicated some reluctance to support it at this time.

Councilman Dick Griffith said he now believes the decision should not be made until the budget hearings — particularly in light of the bombshell property reassessments many San Bruno residents recently received.

"I'm now greatly concerned about what impacts the reassessments will have," Griffith said.

San Bruno has been considering implementation of a firefighter-paramedic program since mid-1976, when the county approved its contract for paramedic service with a private firm, Medavac.

In San Mateo County, only the City of South San Francisco had fire fighter-paramedics at the time. It has been permitted to retain that program, which costs each resident approximately $1 a year.

Griffith and Governale originally recommended approval of a local program at a cost of $122,000 in ongoing years. It would mean a tax rate increase of about 11 cents, they reported.

However, a proposal later submitted by the San Bruno fire fighters indicated a lower cost of $65,000 in ongoing years at a 4.2-cent tax rate increase — about $1.66 a year per resident.

While the city's plan proposed hiring seven new fire fighters, the fire fighters themselves said it would be necessary to hire only two new employes.

Fire Chief Harper Peterson said on May 2 that he cannot support the paramedic proposal.

"If we do have paramedics, there's no doubt it will be an increased load on the department," Petersen said. He said he believes it would be necessary to hire at least six new fire fighters to provide an effective paramedic program.

There are no guarantees, he said, that the fire fighter-paramedic program will be more effective than Medavac.

Fire fighting capabilities will suffer, he said, because two always will be on call for paramedic service — even during a fire that's occuring at a different location.

Fire fighters who had presented their proposal at an earlier meeting sat silently during the hearing.

They have said in the past that a local paramedic force would provide more prompt service, at the same time improving the general overall quality of the Fire Department.

Pyramid Power Enjoys Rebirth

BY JANET PARKER

Got a bottle of wine that needs aging? Or an avocado that isn't quite ripe yet? A San Bruno man claims to have a solution — the pyramid — which, Thomas DuGan says, is a little explored energy source that has the power to bring just bout anything to its full state of maturity.

It's an idea, he says, that is "ahead of its time."

DuGan sleeps under a pyramid — an eight-foot-tall aluminum structure that fits over his bed.

He has one set up in his living room near the light, so he can read while sitting beneath it.

And, he says, he places fruits and other edibles under it to enhance the flavor.

Skeptical? You're not the only one, DuGan admits.

"I can see where a lot of people think it's crazy, but they soon find out it's not."

Hundreds of people across the country, he says, are witnessing the effects of the pyramid and becoming believers. The powers of the pyramid were featured recently in a television special narrated by Omar Sharif. And, hundreds of small companies have been created in recent years — most of them on the East Coast — to market the pyramid.

It's becoming the most talked-about structure since Buckminster Fuller's geodesic dome.

DuGan sets up his pyramids at craft shows in the area and watches the reaction of the curious.

"Hardly anybody laughs or chuckles and disappears down the road. There are a lot of people who come by and say, 'Oh, yes, I've heard about that from so-and-so.'"

About three years ago, DuGan read an article regarding the alleged power of the pyramid. At that time, there wasn't much written about the pyramid and little interest in its usefulness in modern times.

DuGan began building pyramids and exploring the different uses of the triangular-sided structures.

The possible uses of the pyramid — if you are a believer — are endless, he says. In many cases, he claims, the effects are apparent in only 20 to 25 minutes.

With other pyramid supporters, DuGan says he has placed jugs of water under the pyramid and then used the water on house plants. He claims the energized water produces healthier plants.

He has placed pipe tobacco under the pyramid for up to 30 minutes and believes it makes for a milder smoke.

Some people, he says, have been convinced of the powers of the pyramid after placing razor blades under the structure between shaves. Many have found that the number of times the razor blade can be used is increased.

DuGan recalls using one blade for four months.

DuGan says he sees no conflict in that the pyramid supposedly can ripen one fruit and preserve another. The energy source of the pyramid simply brings both products to their "full state of maturity," he says.

They've also experimented with milk, eggs, meat, avocados and themselves.

DuGan says he's felt a "pulsating sensation" and intense heat through his body after standing under the pyramid.

Since he has been sleeping under the pyramid, he says he sleeps more soundly, but is more aware of, "in tune," with his dreams.

"I used to be the kind of person who simply went to bed, turned out the lights and woke up — that was it."

Now, he says he wakes up about 4 a.m. in the middle of a vivid dream. He rests in a semi-consciousness and "lets the dream unfold in front of me."

"When I do get up, I have a lot of energy and I'm ready to go."

But, one must be in a positive frame of mind for the pyramid to be beneficial. A depressed person who sits under the pyramid will walk away only more unhappy, he says.

The concept of the pyramid as a conductor of energy is really nothing new. DuGan says there are many mysteries associated with the Egyptian pyramids. Many items placed in the great pyramids in modern times have been remarkably preserved, he says he has discovered in his research.

The first pyramids that he constructed contained the scaled-down dimensions of the Great Pyramid of Gizeh, which has a perimeter of 365.24 yards — the same number as days in a year.

The effective pyramid, he says, must be in line with the North Pole's magnetic field. The perfect degree of slant, he says, is 68 degrees. Any pyramid can be moved to a different location and still retain its effectiveness, if a compass is used to "tune" the structure so the apex is lined up with the North Pole, he says.

Each of the triangular sides must be equal.

He and his friends have constructed pyramids of varying sizes. They set up one at the Pulgas Water Temple pool that had a 32 square foot base — 29 feet tall from the center to the apex.

DuGan has access to some wide-open property in Oregon, clear of any metal or steel distractions, such as girders or tubing. They have set up pyramids there to conduct experiments and are now drawing up the plans for a permanent structure that will be two stories tall with a 62-square-foot base.

Although DuGan has been building pyramids for three years, he didn't turn his pastime into a business until four months ago. With his wife, Suzanne, and a friend from Los Angeles, he formed a company called Geometrics.

The basic pyramid is an aluminum structure with a 15 and one-eighth inch base costing $25.95.

But, for the skeptics — "and there are many," — there's a "Get Acquainted Model" made of crescent board for $4.95 — just big enough to slip some fresh fruits or vegetables or a bottle of wine inside.

Anyone who finds the pyramid totally useless or ineffective can return it to the company, he says.

Karen Curran of San Mateo was one of the first customers. She was convinced by participating in a few experiments that the pyramid indeed does conduct energy, she says.

She places under her pyramid fruit and pitchers of water to feed her plants. But an experiment with wine is what convinced her. One glass of wine was placed under the pyramid for 30 minutes while another glass was placed outside the same length of time. The wine that had been under the pyramid, she says, had a milder, smoother taste.

"When I first started hearing about this, I was skeptical — very," she says. "Things like that are going on all over the world."

Dinner in a Pie Shell

Good morning, good cooks.

Dinner in a pastry shell is just what this handsome Hash Browns and Ham pie offers. And it's so easy on the cook. Tender, frozen southern style hash browns need no peeling or dicing and can be used just as they tumble from the bag. For a quick thaw, run hot water over them and drain well. Mix potatoes with other ingredients and spoon into prepared shell. Bake until crust is golden and the cheese hovers over the potatoes in a tempting melted state.

Nell Norton

HASH BROWNS AND HAM PIE

- 1 9" unbaked pastry shell
- 4 cups frozen southern style hashhbrowns
- 4 tablespoons butter or margarine
- ½ cup frozen chopped onions
- 1 large egg, beaten
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon prepared mustard
- 1½ cups grated Cheddar cheese
- 1½ cups slivered cooked ham

Make up favorite pastry recipe for 1 crust pie, adding ¼ teaspoon marjoram to flour. Fit prepared dough into 9" pie plate. Thaw the four cups potatoes by rinsing under hot water; drain well. Melt three tablespoons butter. Add the half cup onions and saute lightly. Beat the egg with one teaspoon each salt and prepared mustard. Add to onions; pour over potatoes. Mix in one cup of cheese. Put two cups potato mixture into prepared pastry shell. Top with the one-and-one-half cups ham. Add rest of potatoes. Melt the remaining tablespoon butter and drizzle over top. Cover top with foil. Bake in 375-degree oven for 35 minutes. Remove from oven. Sprinkle with the remaining cheese. Return to oven; bake uncovered for 15 minutes longer. Cool for 10 minutes before cutting. Serve plain or with mushroom sauce. Makes 6 servings.

New Equipment

Peninsula Hospital and Medical Center is in the process of acquiring the most modern, automated type of equipment available, known as a "Centrifichem."

The Centrifichem system will perform up to 30 different chemical analysis (one at a time) on 30 different tiny samples of blood in a period of 3 to 12 minutes each.

The results of these tests are stored in a computer and printed on a composite report of all the tests on each individual patient whose blood is being tested.

This gives the physician a highly valuable report on the possible illnesses from which a patient may be suffering. The same tests can be made at a later time to determine a patient's progress.

Energy Exhibit

A traveling exhibit packed with information on energy-saving appliances, home insulation and other energy conservation techniques visits Daly City on May 12 through 17 with tips to help homeowners and businesses save energy and money.

Pacific Gas and Electric company's traveling Energy Conservation Center, a 40-foot long trailer housing dozens of displays and packed with pamphlets, will be staffed by two PG&E energy conservation specialists to answer questions.

Admission to the Energy Conservation Center is free. The exhibit will be open to the public from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Wards Garden Shop, Serramonte Center.

Players Revive Vintage Musical

"You Gotta Have Dirt!" a happy musical play about the joys of living in Colma and Daly City, will be presented May 28 at 7:30 p.m. at Broadmoor Presbyterian Church, 377 87th St., Daly City, by the Broadmoor Brittle Players.

The public is invited to purchase tickets from cast members or at the door on the evening of the performance. Admission is $2 for adults; $1 for those under 12.

"You Gotta Have Dirt!" was first staged at BPC almost 10 years ago. Its revival at this time is in response to requests for "second generation" friends of the cast and church to view the vintage show. Proceeds will benefit the Mt. Hermon Conference fund.

Dedicated to family style fun, "You Gotta Have Dirt!" recalls the days when hog farms sprawled the Colma hills and Daly City progress gave homemakers so many new-fangled conveniences that time-filling became a family concern.

Appearing in the show are Kay Mattson, Jill Harder, Paul Gfroerer and Gillespie, as the McGuire family; Charlotte Spruiell and Delmar Severy, as Bubble and Dad Gumm; Kay Pierce; Collins Orton; Olive Smith; Perky Ramroth; Bunny Gillespie; Rodger Mattson and Jay Pierce, as Colma's talented talking pigs, Snuffles and Mudpie; and John Morrice. Show accompanist is Janet Wilson.

Vote May Decide Marina Expansion

By JANET PARKER

South San Francisco's proposed $8.4 million marina expansion inched nearer to a ballot measure Wednesday night which would leave the decision to build nor not to build up to voters.

Both proponents and opponents of the Oyster Point Marina expansion — expected to turn the harbor into one of the biggest on San Francisco Bay — got a boost from the City Council. But the ultimate fate of the project remains uncertain.

However, significant pressure to build the marina project came with a stern warning from a regional Water Quality Control Board official.

Senior Engineer Dennis Mishek told the council that it's in hot water over delays in its project and that another delay could cost the city a fine of $6,000 a day.

In yet another development, the council learned that a private developer has notified City Manager Walter Birkelo of his desire to take over the marina expansion project.

The council — after a frequently boisterious public discussion — adopted seven points of action recommended by Birkelo.

It authorized the city manager to:

• Sign the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers permit for construction which was received April 18.

• Discuss with the San Mateo County Harbor District possible ways to cooperate in the expansion.

• Investigate "at least one marina developer's term and conditions" for private construction and operation of the marina.

• Negotiate with the consulting engineers to prepare plans and specifications for construction bids.

• Place the proposed engineering agreement on a future council agenda.

It also directed City Atty. John Noonan to review the city's obligations to date with the state Department of Navigation and Ocean Development — the agency providing the major loan for the expansion — and to study procedures to place the project on a special election ballot if the council decides ultimately to do so.

Finally, it also referred the preliminary plan to the Planning Commission for review and recommendation "at the earliest opportunity."

South San Francisco has been considering expansion and improvement of its aging marina for more than three years. It would increase the number of berths from 280 to 570 and include construction of a fishing pier, boat launching ramps, restaurants, shops and marina facilities.

However, the United Taxpayers' Association began its protest of the project early last year and already is organizing a petition campaign to force the marina to a ballot measure if the council won't do so on its own.

Part of the million project cost estimate is $1 million to control leeching — the flow of land, debris and the garbage fill upon which the marina is constructed into the Bay.

A court order in 1974 required the city to control the leachate problem.

City officials have been able to convince the WQCB to delay severe action against the city. South San Francisco completed $100,000 of interim improvements in 1975 and has been waiting to include the major work as part of the total marina project.

But Mishek told the council Wednesday the WQCB has had its fill of waiting.

He read a letter from WQCB Regional Director Fred Dierker asking the city to "immediately report the reason for these delays" in the leachate control improvements.

"... If the proposed leachate control improvements are not constructed in the shortest possible time, the matter will be referred to the attorney general and appropriate action wil be taken," Dierker reported.

Appropriate action, Mishek explained, could include a contempt of court citation leading to the severe financial penalties upon the city until improvements are made.

"It is a court order you are violating right now," Mischek warned. The engineer said WQCB was close to taking action against the city last fall when it submitted an updated construction timetable.

He said WQCB learned just last week that leachate control has been pushed back again so that construction would begin in January and not be completed until June.

Consulting Engineer Bill Caroll told the council there's no guarantee that the proposed leachate control measures will cure the problem 100 per cent.

In the meantime, a Santa Rosa developer, Kevin O'Keefe of Western Water Ways, Inc., has informed Birkelo by letter that he is interested in developing the marina as a private project. It is the first such formal offer the city has received.

For the first time at any of the council's marina discussions, there were as many marina suporters ready to speak as there were opponents.

Wallace Fleming — a Daly City resident who has a boat in the marina — told the council that the marina is the only recreation facility in South San Francisco that pays for itself. (The council is expecting to repay its DENOD marina loan using revenue from boat taxes and fees.)

"You get an income you can't possibly get out of any other activity," Fleming said. "It's going to generate one hell of a lot of money for the city of South San Francisco."

He pointed out his own property tax bill on his boat included $211.34 for the South San Francisco Unified School District alone.

Oyster Point Yacht Club Commodore Ron Ensinger said boaters are now paying a total of $74,200 in personal property taxes and the marina expansion can only increase that tax base.

"Delays are already hurting the present marina and the planned expansion," Ensinger said. Because of delays, inflation has raised the original $6.6 million construction estimate to $8.4 million, he pointed out.

"Tell it like it is," he said. "The Oyster Point Marina is the only recreational facility in the city that is making money."

Marina opponents — who have charged that the city's general fund will be held liable if the marina loans default — said they will wait a month to determine if the referendum drive will officially begin.

It's still possible that the council will place the issue on a ballot at that time.

Ron Acosta, a South San Francisco resident who took the city to court in 1975 over the method of financing a proposed police and fire facility, said the WQCB is simply using "a scare tactic" on the city.

"We are not a no-growth organization," Acosta said of the UTA. "We would like to see that marina out there. But we don't think we should place the funds of this city in jeopardy."

The council adopted the seven points of action 4-0. Councilman William Borba abstained, saying he didn't see any urgent need to vote.

Dropping Nurse Positions Rapped

The president of the American Federation of Teachers Local 1481 has rapped the president of the Jefferson Union High School District Board of Trustees for suggesting that school nurse positions could be cut in the proposed $16 million 1977-78 budget.

JUHSD Board President Jane Powell remarked at a board budget session this week that school nurse positions could possibly be handled through contracting, rather than by full-time employes.

Mrs. Powell also suggested that the board look at the district's school psychologist positions for possible budget cuts.

AFT president Marcy Ballard has sent Mrs. Powell a letter protesting the board president's remarks.

"Teachers, including nurses and psychologists, provide direct services to students in this district; teachers are fixed costs in the district budget," Mrs. Ballard said in the letter.

"To suggest that financial problems can be easily remedied by simply cutting teachers is to deny the purpose of this district, which is to provide effective classroom instruction and support services to students," she continued.

Mrs. Ballard further stated to Mrs. Powell that "aside from the services offered students in this district, these teachers you talk about 'cutting' are real, live human beings who are committed and dedicated in their work."

Finance Losses Calculated by Bruno Schools

By TERRY DAVENPORT

Faces tightened with frustration on May 2 as the San Bruno Park School District Board heard how two bills now before the state Senate and Assembly would affect the district.

Both bills attempt to implement the Serrano-Priest decision through massive redistribution of property wealth between rich and poor school districts.

"This is the biggest issue in public finance that this state has ever faced," said Kenneth Hall, director of School Services of California. He came from Sacramento at the invitation of the board to explain the effects of the bills.

The school finance expert said the San Bruno district stands to lose funds from provisions in both Assembly Bill 65 and Senate Bill 525 and that the district's best hope lies in dramatic amendments to the bills currently being discussed by the legislature.

The overall impact of AB 65 is that San Bruno would have to pay $245,683 to get back $10,528, due to the loss of state aid, loss of Early Childhood Education dollars and an increase in the state teachers retirement system.

The district would lose $14,187 if SB 525 were enacted.

AB 65 would allow the district to have only a .0219 tax rate reduction, rather than the anticipated .4018 reduction from the current tax rate of 1,8529. Under SB 525, San Bruno would have a tax rate decrease of .2009.

After hearing the bad news, Trustee Christo M. Pallas said, "Most people in San Bruno are now paying 30 per cent more taxes (due to reassessments). With this coming along, it's going to really make people suffer."

"This is especially detrimental to those on fixed incomes. I would expect a major taxpayer revolt," said Trustee Eugene May.

Specifically, AB 65 would be harmful to the San Bruno district in four ways:

• The district's contribution to the retirement system would increase to 8.6 per cent in 1977-78 and 11 per cent in 1981-82.

• State basic aid would be phased out in $25 increments, starting in 1977-78, with total elimination by 1981-82.

• As a high wealth school district, San Bruno's taxes would be frozen and the state would recapture 90 per cent of the district's assessed value increase, rather than allowing the district to use it for property tax rollback.

• San Bruno would lose Early Childhood Education dollars.

SB 525's impact also would be harmful to San Bruno, although not as severe:

• The state would recapture 50 per cent of the district's assessed value increase, rather than allowing the San Bruno district to use it for property tax rollback.

• The retirement system expenditure would increase to 8.4 per cent in 1977-78 and to 10 per cent in 1981-82.

Among the amendments being discussed by the legislature that could help San Bruno are a proposal to not reduce state aid, a measure that would not allow "recapture," an amendment that calls for state funding for the increased state teachers retirement system, and a proposal that provides for declining average daily attendance (ADA) carryover of 50 per cent for the second year and 25 per cent for the third year rather than 75 per cent in the first year. (The San Bruno district expects to lose about 185 children in the coming year.)

Because of the differences between the two pieces of legislation, Hall said, "Conflict would result in bandaid legislation rather than a comprehensive response to Serrano."

Lease Offer for SSF Marina

By JANET PARKER

A Vallejo marina development company is the first to formally announce its interest in the South San Francisco Oyster Point Marina.

Western Water Ways, Inc., based at Glen Cove Marina, is interested in signing a long-term lease with the City of South San Francisco for operation of Oyster Point.

Vice-president Kevin O'Keefe has written City Manager Walter Birkelo, expressing his interest and offering to enter negotiations with the city.

O'Keefe said he already has had "a number of discussions" with Birkelo concerning the proposal of Western Water Ways.

O'Keefe said his company is interested in purchasing the existing marina facilities "in cash."

In addition, he said, the company would expect a long-term lease from the city for the marina, a former garbage dumping site.

O'Keefe's offer comes as the City Council considers an $8.4 million expansion of Oyster Point Marina using primarily a Department of Navigation and Ocean Development (DENOD) loan.

However, the United Taxpayers Association of South San Francisco is fighting the council's plans to expand the marina. Members say that the city's general fund will be held liable if the marina loans — to be repaid from boat berthing fees and taxes and other marina revenues — should default.

The UTA has repeatedly suggested in recent months that the city investigate the possibility of a private developer taking over the marina and eventually financing the improvements.

The city's present improvement plans include increasing the number of berths from 280 to 570 and constructing a fishing pier, boat-launching ramps, restaurants, shops and marina facilities.

O'Keefe would not reveal any financial amounts attached to his proposal, because other private developers also might be interested in competing for ownership of Oyster Point Marina.

Birkelo said he had received inquiries from other potential developers, but O'Keefe's is the only formal proposal to date.

Wednesday night, the City Council directed Birkelo to take seven different steps toward a report on the marina's status. One of those steps was to contact and investigate the feasibility of development by a private firm.

He said it's too early to determine the advantages and disadvantages of private development.

"I do feel it's well worth discussing in more specific detail," Birkelo said.

However, he pointed out that, regardless of the private development proposal, the city still is responsible for $1 million worth of leachate control work required by the Water Quality Control Board. Leachate is the land debris from the former dumping area that inadvertently flows into San Francisco Bay.

He said the city still would want to retain some financial interest in the marina.

If the city were to reach agreement with a private developer, the manager asked, it would be necessary to protect the city's interest in revenues from the project.

"If we decide to do that, we would negotiate the type of agreement that would minimize the city's losses," he stated.

O'Keefe said he has had his eye on Oyster Point Marina since 1970. Western Water Ways owns several marinas in the San Francisco Bay Delta and has been in business for seven years.

He said private ownership of the marina would mean that the city would not be liable for any of the development loans and that the marina property would be placed back on the tax roles to gain property tax revenue.

Blood Pressure Tests Planned

"One in every seven adults has high blood pressure and half of them don't know it," according to Dr. Oscar Hills, president of the San Mateo County Medical Society.

He issued the warning in connection with the first free countywide blood-pressure screening program. It will be held this week, which is National Hospital Week.

Dr. Hills cautioned that undetected high blood pressure can lead not only to strokes and heart attacks, but to blindness and kidney disease. It is also the major cause of death among black Americans.

Local hospitals, clinics and business firms are cooperating in the testing project. The main one will be on May 14 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Locations of the free test clinics: Gemco, 2485 El Camino Real, Redwood City; Flood Park, 215 Bay Road, Menlo Park; Payless, 666 Concar Drive, San Mateo; Chope Community Hospital, San Mateo; Tanforan Shopping Center, San Bruno; Serramonte Shopping Center, Daly City; Westlake Shopping Center, Daly City.

Free Measles Shots

A series of free measles immunization clinics has been set countywide, the San Mateo County Health and Welfare Department has announced.

The clinics are free to both adolescents and preschoolers, since both groups are likely not to have been properly immunized, Dr. Brodia, public health director said. He recently warned of a possible local measles outbreak.

Dates and locations of the free clinics:

May 17 — Serramonte High School, Daly City, 2:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.

May 18 — United Methodist Church, San Bruno, 2 to 4 p.m.; District health office, East Palo Alto, 1-5 p.m.; district health office, Redwood City, 5-6:30 p.m.

May 19 — District health office, South San Francisco, 2-4 p.m.

May 20 — Samaritan House, San Mateo, 2-5 p.m.

Le Pacini

One of those rebounding subjects in sports is the continual controversy of the practice of "pouring it on."

A football coach has a four touchdown lead with a minute to go, and he tries a pass play into the end zone. A basketball team has a 30 point lead late in the game and the coach puts on a full court press, or leaves his first string in, or both.

The gripes are legitimate, because basketball and football, like most sports, have a time limit, and it becomes obvious at a certain point in a great majority of games who is going to win.

But I can never understand those who accuse baseball managers of pouring it on; who get white with fury when a steal is on by a team with a nine run lead in the seventh inning, or a sacrifice bunt, or a hit and run is tried under roughly the same circumstances.

Because baseball has no time limit, because a game is LITERALLY never over until the last out, and because sudden, unexpected nine and 10 run explosions are certainly not without precedent, it seems to me incumbent upon all managers to score as often as possible under all circumstances for the simple reason that they can never predict what the other guy will do.

This written discussion was triggered by a game last Saturday between Pittsburgh and Houston. According to wire service reports, Pirate Manager Chuck Tanner "eagerly urged his (team) to reach for the extra base, despite the eight run lead."

AFTER the eight run lead, the Pirates stole five bases, four of them leading to runs.

When Tanner was later accused of trying to humiliate the Astros, he replied simply, "I've never seen a team get too many runs. I want to get all I can in any given game."

Ty Cobb had the same philosophy. He was often criticized for bunting or stealing a base when his side had a big lead, the accusations running from," Cobb is so miserable he just wants to rub their nose in it," to, "He's just building up his personal statistics."

Cobb's standard replied, usually accompanied by a spit, was quite logical. "I get paid to score runs, not to keep score."

Strangely, homerun hitters are never accused of pouring it on if they hit one out in the late innings when their team has a big lead. And that's proper. You don't dare tell a Dave Kingman to pop out or go for singles just because his team is way ahead.

No, you can't anymore tell a Kingman to quit hitting homeruns than you can tell a Lou Brock quit stealing bases.

SUDDEN THOUGHT: What is it with these "experts" who become obsessed with the "win" column, especially in late season. They sit around and compare every contending team's win column. But they never compare the loss columns, which, ultimately, are just as important.

LOCAL NOTES: Ken Dito, the Daly City man who helps make the San Francisco sports scene sparkle with his work on S.F. cablevision, pulled off another coup recently with the six hour televising (two hours for three consecutive nights) of the Golden Gloves finals. Not only did Dito do his usual capable job as play-by-play man (in this case, it was actually blow-by-blow), but he assembled a color crew that displayed more knowledge, moxie and GENUINE "expertise" than any of the national TV fight teams we've seen.

What made Dito's promotion more remarkable was that he got his color commentators for free — as volunteers. Thus was this super sports salesman able to put together more than a century of prize ring experience in Eddie Muller and Jack Downey.

Muller is the recently retired San Francisco Examiner fights writer who put in close to half a century covering the "racket," and who is nationally acknowledged as one of the country's true experts on the sport of prize fighting. Unofficially, Muller, besides having the knowledge which only such experience can muster, also has a computer for a memory.

Downey has either fought or refereed in the ring for more than half a century, and there just isn't anybody around who knows more about judging fights and fighters and the rules of the ring than Downey.

How was Dito able to scoop the networks with a budget lower than Idi Amin's morality?

"Easy," says Dito. "Muller and Downey are dedicated men. They did it for the love of the game and for the fun of it. They may be the last of their breed."

Strange, and ironic, that two true professionals have more of the pure amateur spirit than most "amateur" athletes I've met.

STILL ON the local scene, and hope you've been noticing how some of the local boys have been doing in the Biggies.

As this is written, former Terra Nova and Crestmoor whiz Keith Hernandez is still hitting over .300, whacking the long ball and driving in a lot of runs for the Cardinals as well as fielding brilliantly at first base. Teammate Ken Reitz, from Jefferson, is getting his hits and still playing one of the best defensive third bases in baseball. Southpaw Bob McClure, while building a reputation as having the best pick-off move in the American League, has won and saved several games in relief for the surprising Milwaukee Brewers. He is being more and more relied upon in tense, late inning situations. McClure, you'll remember, attended Terra Nova.

AND OH YES, the results of that recent marathon basketball game played at Terra Nova as a benefit for Jeanine Battaion, the young lady who still remains comatose in a Peninsula hospital after an auto accident: In an amazingly close game for a 24-hour combat, the Black team edged the Gold team, 1491,1451, coming from behind an early 43 point deficit.

Leading scorer was senior Dave Linney, with 228; most of them, believe it or not, from outside — way outside. Said his varsity basketball coach, But Bresnahan (who, as one of the sponsors of the event, saw virtually the whole thing), "I've never seen Linney that hot. I mean, he was making 25 footers, with hardly any misses. No cheap shots: He played like a man possessed. I just wish I could bottle that for next season."

Others over 100 were Steve Roe (170), Marty Hohe (132), Scott Galehouse (120), Joe Battaion. — Jeanine's brother — (120) and John Campbell (111). Leading female scorer was Moe Turner, with 88. Tom Murray and Mike Proulx put in the most time, both playing close to 12 hours.

Three coaches (Bresnahan, lightweight coach Gary Johnson and girls' coach Jim Soden) and 56 players exhausted themselves for Jeanine Battaion.

Sports And Recreation

Hunch League

In the Daly City Recreation Department sponsored Three-Man Hunch League, the Sportsmen and the Celtics won their respective divisions.

In the southern division, the Celtics led by Rene Mariluch's 20 points, defeated the Backdoormen 40-26 in their first playoff game. In the second game, Woody's Boys pulled the upset of the year by defeating the Co-Round Robin Champion Sticks 40-34. Mark Ricossa led Woody's Boys with 16 points and Gus Milon of the Sticks led all scorers with 18 points.

The championship game was settled by Mariluch, who tallied 24 points. The Celtics had 40; Woody's Boys, 28.

Playoff Teams Set

Colts' Bordi One-Hits TN

By JOHN MURPHY
Times Correspondent

El Camino High's baseball team kept its unbeaten North Peninsula League record intact by downing second-place Terra Nova 7-1 Friday.

In other NPL contests Westmoor blanked Serramonte 4-0, South City topped Half Moon Bay 6-4 and Oceana edged Jefferson 6-5.

El Camino scored three runs in the first inning and then breezed behind the one-hit pitching of Rich Bordi. Mike Nickas highlighted the Colts' three-run first with a two-run triple to deep left.

Bordi struck out 10 and walked three. John Donalaya paced EC at the plate with three hits and an RBI, and Nickas contributed a pair of hits and RBI's.

Mike Mooney had Terra Nova's only hit, a line single to left-center in the first inning. TN had scored 41 runs the day before.

It took a steady pitching performance from Westmoor's Chris Toohey to beat Serramonte. Toohey scattered five hits while striking out eight and walking none.

South City withstood a late Half Moon Bay rally to remain in third place. Matt Allio picked up the win for the Warriors and also sparked SSF at the plate with a pair of hits and RBI's.

Standout reliever Jim Dunn picked up the save for the Warriors. SSF led 6-0 entering the final inning before the Cougars struck for four runs. However, Dunn put out the fire to record his third save of the season.

Jon Bruce led HMB at the plate with two hits and two RBI's.

Oceana combined two hits, three walks and two hit batsmen to score five times in the final inning to defeat Jefferson. Bill Rothgary, who relieved Liam Gogan, picked up the win for the Sharks.

The Sharks' victory assures them a playoff spot along with round-robin champ El Camino, Terra Nova and South City.

DC Boys Baseball Marks Third Week

Three weeks of league play have been completed in the Daly City Recreation Dept's Boys baseball leagues. This week's results:

EIGHTH GRADE — BYA nipped OLM 13-10, paced by the 4-4 hitting of Rich Bemis and Ed Villatore's fine play at third base. In the only other game, the Scots edged the Saints 1-0.

SEVENTH GRADE WESTERN — Holy Angels beat OLM 12-6 while St. Andrews downed BYA, 11-1.

SEVENTH GRADE EASTERN — Joe Sapadrita blasted a homer and a single and drove in eight runs as the Bombers bombedOLM 26-10. Mark Terry went 3-4 and added his fifth home as BYA downed PAL 13-8.

SIXTH GRADE WESTERN — The combined three-hit itching of Ed Katz and Ray Villar led the PAL Hustlers to 3-1 win over OLM, their third victory without a loss. Katz struck out nine and pitched without a loss. Katz struck out nine and pitched three no-hit innings. Villar stroked two doubles.

SIXTH GRADE EASTERN — The PAL Bruins downed the Saints 29-6. OLPH rallied for five runs in the fourth inning to get close but the Scots held on for an 11-10 win. Al Carreon and Gary Glavic blasted homers to lead SAL to an 18-6 win over BYA.

FIFTH GRADE WESTERN — Chris Callas pitched 2 no-hit innings and blasted a grand slam as the SAL Roadrunners downed the Scots 12-10. Perry McDowell's defense and pitching led an 11-1 St. Thomas More win over OLM.

FIFTH GRADE EASTERN — John Perez led BYA to a 23-3 win over the PAL Flamethrowers. SAL's Flyers edged OLM 8-7. Tim Murray had a homer, double, walk and four RBI's to lead Holy Angels to a 7-5 win over the Savages.

Trojan Nine Loses Finale

Skyline College ended regular season Coast Conference baseball play on a sour note Friday as visiting Ohlone ripped the Trojans 22-7.

Skyline finished with a 9-9, fourth-place record, good enough to earn them a spot in next week's Shaugnessy playoffs. The Trojans are scheduled to meet first-place Cabrillo in first round post season play Wednesday, May 11 at Cabrillo in Aptos.

A lack of consistent pitching hurt Skyline again as Ohlone banged out 20 hits.

Undefeated Champions

Wildcats Win in Soccer

Sponsored by the Westlake International Youth Soccer Club, the Wildcats defeated the San Francisco Vikings Cosmos in the final game, 7-0, to become the undefeated and untied champions in the second round Flame league soccer competition.

They were coached by Mike Salvemini, along with his sons, Ronnie, Danny and Lennie, potential members of the United States Olympic Soccer squad for 1980.

The Wildcats showed that despite their tender age they had absorbed the concept of team-working along with individual ball control skills. And, playing in seven-a-side matches each had ball possession more often than in the regular 11-a-side version of soccer.

Top scorer of the team was Mike Salvemini Jr., who can beat a goalie from difficult angles and is capable of running through the opponent's defense once he has the ball. He also can be a solid defender. Matt Cannon again scored on a powerful free kick in the final game and showed why he is so valuable in the center-halfback position, very difficult to pass. David Ahern, David Ducot and Chris Strong who converted a penalty in the last outing all are steadily improving in ball control and can score if they glimpse an opportunity.

Greg Lenzini though easily overlooked by the opposing team is very quick on the turn. He is quite capable of placing an accurate pass for a teammate or else beat the goalie himself as he did during the last game.

On the contrary, the Dioli twins — Morgan and David — are never overlooked by the other teams as they, on long legs, outstride defenders and forwards both.

The opposition is confused by their switching positions. There can't be one Dioli in two places at the same time.

Rich Bacchi is the ninth member of the team as he, along with the others, plays both offense and defense, because the coaches rotate the "Wildcats'" in each game.

Three more teams from the Westlake International Youth Soccer Club also competed in the league and have begun to emulate the teamwork of the Wildcats so that the future of Westlake soccer is in the feet of young boys and girls like Vicky McCall and Bess Rendon.

Telstars Triumph In DC Volleyball

The Telstars Junior Teen Club combined team work and spirit as they claimed victory over Westlake in the championship game of the Fifteenth Annual Jr. Teen Club Volleyball Tourney at Westlake Community Center.

The tournament, sponsored by the Daly City Recreation Department, hosted seven teams from the four active teen clubs in Daly City — The Telstars from the Westmoor area; Westlake; Eastside from Colma School, and Bayshore from Robertson School.

The gym was hopping with excitement as coaches Manual Solis and Wayne Lukaris guided their team to triumph to upset highly favored Westlake, which finished a close second. Highly spirited Bayshore finished third, while Eastside came in fourth.

Although all teams were high in enthusiasm the annual "Spirit and Sportsmanship" trophy was awarded to the Bayshore Club, coached by Terry Richards and Diana Tooley. Bayshore was voted the club with the most outstanding drive, sportsmanship and general team play.

Daly City Junior Teens are encouraged to join in the activities of the club based nearest their home.

The teen programs feature a variety of dances, parties, activity nights and trips as well as fun co-rec tournaments. For further information contact the recreation office.

Broadmoor Police Ready Daly City Pact

By NANCY STANCILL

Broadmoor's Police Commission voted 2 to 1 Thursday to request Daly City to prepare a police services contract to take effect July 1.

The Police Commission accepted a proposal from City Manager David Rowe of Daly City which would provide the Broadmoor Police Protection District with services at an initial, 1977-78 cost of $206,700.

If a seven-to 10-year contract is signed, as proposed with Daly City, it will be the end of the Broadmoor Police Department.

Voting against the proposal was Commissioner Wayne Johnson, who attempted to have the matter postponed for further consideration of a liability insurance proposal and to allow additional contract negotiations with Colma.

Johnson hinted at legal action to prevent a contract with Daly City, as he pointed out that an attorney was present at the Thursday meeting and said, "You can draw your own conclusions."

The attorney, G. Evan Mantle, had told the commission before the vote that he represented Susan Johnson (Wayne Johnson's wife), Oralia Handlin and "other concerned citizens."

Mantle warned that acceptance of a seven-to 10-year contract with Daly City would be obligating the unincorporated area "far beyond the terms of your (commissioners') offices."

The attorney also said a contract with Daly City also would be questioned legally as "an attempt to achieve annexation and dissolution."

Johnson noted that he has filed a complaint with the San Mateo County District Attorney's Office alleging that one of the meetings to discuss the proposed contract with Daly City violated the state's Brown Act, an open meeting law.

Commission Chairman John McCloskey said a contract with Daly City would be checked for legality by the District Attorney's Office before either party signs.

The controversial decision, which has been pending since the Broadmoor Police Department lost its liability insurance in December and went under the wing of the Daly City Police Department under a temporary, six-month contract, was approved before an audience of about 20.

The action was taken at a special 10 a.m. meeting which had been called by McCloskey over the protest of a number of Broadmoor residents. Several residents, in two letters, charged that McCloskey was attempting to stifle debate by holding the meeting at a time inconvenient to many working people.

"We've had meetings at 10 a.m., 2 p.m., 4 p.m. and at night," shrugged McCloskey.

McCloskey said Daly City had asked for a decision by May 13, and he did not see the point in waiting any longer.

The chairman pointed out that the commission "has nothing from Colma. We have a copy of a letter from the police chief to the City Council, but no contract proposal."

Colma's City Council Monday voted, 3-1, to continue negotiating with the Broadmoor Police Commission, but expressed doubt that the city could offer a contract for as little as $166,000, as Colma Police Chief Jim Dorris had proposed.

Commissioner Dean Davenport said Colma would not allow Broadmoor's officers to be hired into the Colma department at their existing rates of pay and he was against it.

McCloskey asked former Broadmoor police chief Bill Beard (now a captain with the "Broadmoor Division" of the Daly City Police Department under the existing contract) how the Broadmoor seven-member police department feels about the two proposals.

Beard said all but one officer have "indicated a strong" preference to go with Daly City, rather than Colma.

Beard said Colma's lack of Civil Service job guarantees and lower salaries and ranks for police officers made the Broadmoor personnel uneasy about a Colma contract.

McCloskey said the "most logical and practical solution is a contract with Daly City. The temporary arrangement we've had since Jan. 1 has worked very well."

Although the commission audience appeared more subdued than usual during meetings on the explosive issue, several residents spoke against the Daly City proposal.

Ralph Damon read a lengthy report of a poll of 100 voters he recently took in Broadmoor. He said the majority favored retaining the department.

McCloskey said he feels that the commission's $24,500 liability insurance offer from a Foster City agent "may be reasonable for insurance, but it would be a significant drain" on the residents.

Mary Bianchi told the commission, "I want you to vote for whatever is best for me as a taxpayer and I want these men (Broadmoor policemen) to be employed, whether as policemen or toilet cleaners. Some of these men are not young and would find it hard to get a job."

Mrs. Bianchi was referring to the provision of the Daly City contract proposal which calls for hiring all Broadmoor personnel at the same salary levels, but not necessarily to remain as police officers.

Other contract proposals call for a starting tax rate of $1.06 per $100 of assessed valuation, not to exceed $1.20 during the life of the contract, as the cost of police services.

In addition, the district would be patrolled by "not less than one certificated police officer 24 hours per day."

Beard said the Broadmoor officers currently are being evaluated by Daly City to determine which of them will remain as police officers. He also noted that one Broadmoor officer has requested a lateral transfer to Daly City, while another has told Beard he will go to another agency.

Shots Fired At Millbrae PGE Station

Sheriff's deputies were searching today for a gunman who sprayed a PG&E substation across the Bayshore Freeway from San Francisco International Airport with bullets sometime Wednesday or Thursday.

Sheriff's Deputy Larry Hefner was called to the substation shortly after noon Thursday by Charles Osborn, 62, a foreman for the utility company, who reported he found bullet holes in the west wall of the building and four bullets embedded in the wall.

Hefner said the bullets had to be shot from at least 10 to 15 feet away as determined from the angle they entered the sheetmetal building. He said there are a number of houses nearby.

According to Hefner, the shots were fired in the direction of the freeway. He said the bullets could have been hollow nosed and from a .22-caliber rifle or from a .25-caliber pistol.

The building, located north of Center Street in Millbrae, is surrounded by a chainlink fence.

Car Explodes But Man Escapes Unhurt

The driver of a car that exploded into flames upon impact with another vehicle in Millbrae miraculously escaped injury Thursday night.

George Macias of 164 Romney Ave., South South San Francisco, was driving north on El Camino Real at 6:36 p.m. when involved in a collision at the Santa Inez Avenue intersection with a car driven by Paul McKinney, 26, of 217 San Benito Ave., San Bruno, police reported.

Macias' car slid sideways and hit a signal pole on a traffic island, causing the pole to fall on a third vehicle driven by Marcel Rehse of 244 Acacia Ave., San Bruno, police said.

Macias' car burst into flames and came to rest in a northbound lane of El Camino. There were no injuries, police said, although Macias' car was a total loss. McKinney's car suffered moderate damage and Rehse's car had minor damage.

Arraignment Due in DC Slaying

A Russian immigrant who originally claimed to be an Olympic wrestler was held to answer Thursday to a charge of involuntary manslaughter in the slaying of a Daly City man.

North County Municipal Court Judge F. J. deLarios, at the end of a two-day preliminary hearing ordered Alexander Iltzhenko to be arraigned in San Mateo County Superior Court.

Iltzhenko was arrested by Daly City police on March 21 some 48 hours after the discovery of the body of Sergei Martchov, 21, inside his Daly City apartment.

Iltzhenko, 31, lived with Martchov although he apparently maintained another apartment in San Francisco, police said.

Martchov was found sitting on a couch in his living room with a single bullet in the head from a high-powered rifle.

Police said Iltzhenko offered several versions of where he was from and he was originally arrested using the name Alexander Zabelel.

However, Daly City Police Lt. James Barron said police have since learned the defendant is not an Olympic wrestler, nor is he a bonafide defector, as he claimed at one point.

Testifying at the preliminary hearing were a former roommate, whom the defendant allegedly contacted after the shooting, and a Russian-speaking police dispatcher, Alice Baker, who assisted in interviewing the defendant.

Iltzhenko is represented by attorney Dek Ketchum.

Grenade Explodes At Shop Center

A military-type grenade exploded in the Tanforan Shopping Center parking lot in San Bruno, and a second grenade was found intact by police late Thursday night.

Two Tanforan employes, Robert Blamey Jr., 24, and Rex Cochran, 37, both of Pacifica, reported the explosion to police after the sweeper truck they were driving apparently rolled over the grenade causing the blast.

Blamey told police he heard an explosion while he was driving in the parking lot. He looked in the rear view mirror and saw a large flash and smoke, he told police, about 40 feet behind the truck.

San Bruno police officers found a small crater in the cement at the northwest corner of the parking lot.

Loren Beckley

'Liberty Bell' Is Awarded

Chief County Probation Officer Loren Beckley has been awarded the "Liberty Bell" given by the county Bar Association and Lawyers' Wives of San Mateo County.

The recognition is based on Beckley's outstanding contributions to the field of probation, serving juvenile and adult offenders.

Zerne Haning, president of the Bar Association, made the presentation at a recent gathering held at the Menlo Country Club.

Haning said that as a result of Beckley's leadership, it is his belief that San Mateo County has the best probation department in the state.

Beckley was nominated by seven of his staff members who submitted descriptions of innovative programs designed by Beckley, including the day treatment program for delinquent children, intensive probation services for children and adults, a crime and delinquency prevention program, employment program, the minority-oriented Watoto program, a group foster home project, the Volunteers-in-Probation service, halfway house for adult male offenders and the Aid to Victims and Witnesses program.

Beckley's achievements have been many, and he has been recognized with numerous state and national awards. But in accepting the Bar Association honor, Beckley said having his work recognized on the local level is in many ways the most gratifying.

The Liberty Bell Award is a national project of the American Bar Association in recognition of community service that strengthens the effectiveness of the American system of freedom under the law. More than 100 county service groups had the opportunity to submit entries.

Justice Allison Rouse of the California District Court of Appeal was the keynote speaker.

New officers for the Lawyers' Wives group were installed. They are: Mrs. Thomas Caldwell, president; Mrs. George Taylor, first vice president; Mrs. Robert Courshon, second vice president; Mrs. Clifford Cretan, recording secretary; Mrs. Allen Bollhoffer, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Donald Del Grande, treasurer; and Mrs. William Lanam, state representative.

New Orchestras Plan Performances

WHERE ARE THE DARK-SUITED VIOLINISTS WITH STIFF FACES?

Michael Gibson of Art-Rise with Don Paterson.

By TERRY DAVENPORT

Musicians and music lovers in the North County have something to look forward to — the birth of two new orchestras.

A talent search for musicians now is underway, under the aegis of a brand-new organization called Art-Rise, which is striving to bring the performing arts to the San Bruno vicinity.

"This will be a top-notch program unlike anything this area now has," said Michael Paul Gibson, who is heading the talent search and will conduct the two orchestras.

The word "orchestra" conjures up images of dark-suited violinists with stiff faces sitting on hard-backed chairs, playing polite music. But that's not what Gibson has in mind.

His musicians will play innovative pieces, in addition to classical favorites, in an informal atmosphere designed to make music fun instead of boring. Each performance will be enlivened with skits in the aisles, projections on the walls and theatrical lighting.

Gibson foresees two-day musical happenings that include performances by large and small groups in buildings where local artists display their paintings, sculpture and photography. Musicians and artists will mingle with the audience after each performance.

Admission to the concerts will be free or a small donation. Concerts will be given in a variety of community locations, including schools and nursing homes.

Musicians in at least one of the two orchestras will be paid, payment will be modest at first, however, since Art-Rise still is getting on its feet.

Impossible? That's what people said when Gibson first proposed other revolutionary ideas in Colorado Springs, where he was stationed in the service.

Gibson likes to do the impossible.

"Everyone was talking about getting together musical groups and no one was doing it," he said. So Gibson, who has a master's degree in orchestral conducting from Northwestern University, got busy and formed the Colorado Springs Chamber Music Society. It was a deceptive name for a group of 55 musicians that played five lively concerts over a period of three years under Gibson's baton.

The musicians were not paid, and some drove 120 miles to attend rehearsals. Lacking funds, Gibson had to copy all the parts of one Stravinsky piece by hand. Since many of the orchestra members were in the military and had to travel at the drop of a hat, Gibson often made dozens of phone calls to reschedule rehearsals.

"On the night of our second concert, six musicians were delayed when their plane broke down in another city. The Air Force flew them back just 15 minutes before the concert was to begin," Gibson said.

Despite all these traumas, Gibson's group won rave reviews from the local press.

The secret of the group's success, explained Gibson, was its high standard of excellence. He plans to maintain that level of perfection in the new orchestras, believing that musicians crave excellence as much as audiences.

"We can't give a schlocky performance because everyone else can do that, too," remarked Gibson.

He came to California planning to become self-supporting in music. That goal still has not been attained, although Gibson and three other musicians have been paid small fees for several concerts that they have performed as "The New Age."

Gibson has survived by turning his photography hobby into a business and by doing substitute teaching. The other members of The New Age have side jobs, too, which they would gladly relinquish for full-time musical careers. Rolf Johnson is a gardener who also composes music, Craig Oakley drives a school bus and Howard Moscovitz works as an inventor for a camera company.

When Gibson and Lois Nierenberg met through a Times want ad, they discovered that their ideas meshed to their mutual benefit. Mrs. Nierenberg, the driving force behind Art-Rise, was searching for a musical director and Gibson wanted to be one.

Begun last month, Art-Rise already has a long list of founding members and is currently presenting Opera Lunch in San Bruno, a series of noon opera performances. Art-Rise recently received a grant from the Cultural News Service (a branch of the California Arts Council) and gave Gibson the go-ahead to start recruiting musicians.

Gibson said Art-Rise also is searching for someone to take charge of theatrical presentations, a technical director to handle lighting and sound, a dance director or choreographer. He wants to catalog all artists in the community.

But the future of the orchestras and Art-Rise hinge on additional community support — more blatantly known as "money," Gibson stressed.

"The arts have remained with the wealthy for a long time," he said, explaining that there is little room for innovative ideas in the normal musical channels.

"Art-Rise is a way to give the public what it wants to see on a top level," he added.

Gibson is projecting the first concert for September or October. Selections probably will include a Bach prelude and fugue, a modern piece like the Beatles' "Yesterday," a musical satire called "P.D.Q. Bach," which leans heavily on a bass kazoo, a piece by Rolf Johnson called "Music for 16 Winds and Percussions," and other pieces in modes ranging from jazz to classical.

Gibson is seeking versatile musicians to perform this musical potpourri. Auditions will be held in a relaxed atmosphere, he said. Those interested in playing in either of the orchestras should contact Gibson at 11 S. Fremont St., San Mateo 94401.

People who want to become members of Art-Rise may contact Lois Nierenberg at 2510 Crestmoor Drive, San Bruno 94066. Annual dues are $6, with a reduced rate of $3 for senior citizens and students.

Art-Rise's next organizational meeting will be held May 17 at 7:30 p.m. at Western Federal Savings in the Bayhill Shopping Center, San Bruno.

Television Spots

Art historian Bruce Kurtz interviews four TV commercial directors and examines their work in a 60-minute color video documentary to be shown at the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art through May 22. The tape entitled "Spots: The Popular Art of American Television Commercials" was produced by Arts Communications in New York.

Using government statistics, Kurtz's research revealed that the average American sees more than nine hours of television commercials a week.

'Political Junket' Pro, Con Session

New ideas helpful to their constituents are obtained when politicans attend conferences outside their own communities, three members of the press agreed when they squared off with three local city officials in a panel discussion in Burlingame Saturday.

During discussion at Mercy High School of "The Junketing Myth," Bill Boldenweck, a reporter for the San Francisco Examiner, conceded to the councilmen and to county officials present that "I can't damn you for loitering under the trees in Palm Springs."

But, he cautioned, "It struck me that a lot of things could have been done just as easily by mail."

Boldenweck said, "I don't think anything is wrong with a couple of cocktails." But he told the audience they must remember they are spending the taxpayers' money, just as those in the private sector must keep in mind they are spending their company's money when they are at a convention.

"Is junketing a myth?" Councilman R.D. Martin of Burlingame asked flat out.

"The only way I can learn a lot of things is talking to someone. I've learned more in the bar having a couple of snorts with someone from somewhere else then I ever could by staying home."

He said he had picked up the idea of placing a moratorium on parking tickets during the Christmas season from a councilman from Pomona at a League of California Cities convention.

He also had met another politician who had saved Burlingame $45,000 on its disposal plant after "I picked up a phone and asked him where we could get a federal grant."

Martin admitted, however, that he knew three councilmen who never got out of their hotel rooms during a three-day convention of the League of California Cities.

"When I go out, of course I drink," Martin said. "The people didn't elect a teetotaler."

"As an editor, I don't care where you go," asserted Vincent Mager, a South San Francisco newsman.

He added, however, that it "is a matter of priority." If councilmen feel it necessary for their city's good to attend meetings, they should take funds out of the staff side of the budget before they place it in their own.

"Newspapers must be critical," Mager warned. "You must have justification — priority."

Councilman Terry Mirri of South San Francisco said that while he regards the role of a politician a professional one, he is disturbed that the relationship of a politician and a journalist must be an adversary relationship. But he added that the relationship is necessarily so.

Mirri recalled the criticism he and Councilman Leo Padreddii of South San Francisco had taken because of a trip to the Soviet Union. But, he said, he had never realized before the need for the adversary role between the government and the press prior to visiting a totalitarian regime.

"I must respect the press because you give me a new balance and insight," he said.

William Drake, publisher of the Pacifica Tribune, agreed that sometimes it is possible "to learn more over a couple of beers" than elsewhere, and criticized The Times for its articles on councilmen attending a League of California Cities meeting in San Diego.

"I go to publishers' meetings, and sometimes they are boring as hell," Drake asserted, "but I learn more by getting out of town."

Congressman Leo R. Ryan, who spoke prior to the panel discussion, said that although he has been heavily criticized in the press for his travels, he has learned many things he would never have known had he not gone.

Ryan gave as an example the observation that Switzerland is years ahead not only in disposing of its solid waste but in making money from it. The Bay Area should be embarrassed that it still is looking for solutions to its disposal problems, he added.

First Bruno Condominium Project Wins Planning OK

San Bruno's first condominium project, an 87-unit complex on Cherry Avenue, was approved Monday night by the Planning Commission after it worked out some technicalities connected with the development.

Construction is expected to begin by the end of the year. Units will sell from $60,000 to $70,000.

It will be built on the west side of Cherry Avenue, adjacent to the sprawling "The Place" apartment complex.

Frank Borges of San Mateo, representing Dr. R. Weldon Crabb of South San Francisco, praised the commission's handling of a type of project it has never had to deal with before.

The commission, he said, had to consider the complexities of condominium development and did so "very well."

Although the proposed $6 million development originally was approved by the commission in December 1974, only one of those commissioners, Girvin Whitney, remains.

Other commissioners warned the applicant early in April that nothing short of full-scale reports with detailed maps and drawings would satisfy their curiousity and concern about the project.

Crabb met with the commission again April 18, but commissioners continued a decision until Monday night.

Commissioners were particularly concerned about the financial stability of the developments. The project was delayed in 1974 because of the previous would-be developer's financial setbacks.

Chairman Thomas Ricci pointed out that the project would have sailed through the commission more smoothly if certain information had been provided by the applicant — particularly the financial data — more quickly.

The project approval, he said, became stretched "way out of proportion".

He added that it was not the intent of the Planning Commission to needlessly delay or discourage the project.

"I don't think the City of San Bruno is a no-growth advocate," Ricci said after the development was approved. The commission, he said, judges each project individually and had some specific concerns about the condominiums.

The commission approved a use permit, landscape plan, elevations map and tentative parcel map for the project.

The applicant will now prepare final plans to be submitted to the Planning Commission and then to the City Council by July.

Commissioners spent nearly two hours reviewing technical provisions of the development, including maintenance agreements and responsibilities of purchasers.

They were particularly concerned about the developer's final commitment to the city. One condition of the use permit requires the property owner to contribute to the city an amount equal to the fair market value of 1.09 acres of the land.

However, Planning Director Bill Kelly noted that the city attorney still is investigating to determine if this provision of state condominium laws applies to the project.

Certain recreational facilities which will be constructed on the condominium site may possibly be used as a trade-off against the financial contribution, Kelly said.

Commissioners agreed to allow the city attorney to further study the application of the law and report back to the commission.

Cyclist Hurt

A Millbrae motorcyclist was injured Friday when his motorcycle collided with a car, Millbrae police said.

Witnesses reported that Robert Cox, 27, of Richmond was making a right turn in his car from Taylor Boulevard into Poplar Avenue at 12:18 Friday when motorcyclist John Cornolo, 19, of 907 Hemlock Avenue, Millbrae, started to pass on the inside.

Laying on Guilt Doesn't Help, Specialist States

Making parents feel guilty about abusing their children doesn't help the children; in fact it may hurt them even more, in the view of Dr. Bruno Bettelheim.

The renowned specialist in emotional disorders of children told a conference of social service professionals Thursday at Peninsula Hospital that "guilt is such an unpleasant feeling that we want to give it in the neck to the one who makes us feel guilty. . . . I've seen many more bad things than good happen out of guilt."

Dr. Bettelheim urged those professionals who deal with abusive parents to appeal to the parents' vanity for the good of the child.

"I was incredibly more successful when I told parents that they were such good parents that they were even willing to deprive themselves of having their child in their home for the good of the child. . . . It's far better to create in these parents a good opinion of themselves than to force them with threats."

He admitted that "court action is the only way some parents get the message that child abuse is not acceptable," but, he said, court action should be the last resort.

"My own experience with the court system has been very bad. . . . I've seen kids kicked around like footballs because of court decisions. . . . But it's an American tendency to solve all problems in legal ways."

He's equally critical of the success of court ordered therapy for abusive parents.

"Treatment under threat is not possible. It just wastes the time of the psychiatrist until the court is satisfied. When the psychiatrist and the parent knows that the parent will go to jail if the treatment is ended, there's no free will and treatment isn't possible."

While physical abuse is the most dramatic form of child abuse, Dr. Bettelheim believes that "psychological abuse is at least and maybe more damaging.

"I know of two or three cases where the child committed suicide, but no case of child abuse could be made against the parents."

He added that psychological abuse can be very subtle — nagging a child to death or constant pushing for academic achievement are common examples of the way children are "driven out of their minds."

"You know lower class abuse is physical; middle class abuse is psychological. Right now we're down on lower class abuse because we are middle class."

Dr. Lowell Streiker, executive director of the Mental Health Association of San Mateo County, added that the same parallels can be made about lower class drugs (marijuana, heroin, etc.) which are illegal and middle class drugs (alcohol) which are not.

The conference which lasted the whole day was sponsored by the Parental Stress Service of the Mental Health Association.

August Altar Date

An Aug. 20 wedding date has been circled by Lisa Ann David and Mark L. Hutchins. The couple will exchange vows at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints in Pacifica, where their reception will also take place.

Lisa Ann is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim F. David of South San Francisco, and Mark's parents are Mr. and Mrs. J.B. Hutchins of El Granada.

The future bride is an alumna of El Camino High School and Brigham Young University. She is the sister of Louisa David and granddaughter of William Grooms of Salt Lake City.

Mark is a graduate of Carlsbad High School in New Mexico and San Jose State University and also attended College of San Mateo. He is a member of the Naval Reserve. He is the brother of Tim and Jess Hutchins and Sheila Schockmel and the grandson of J.I. Wingfield of Fresno.

Lisa Ann has asked Cyndy Kirby to be her maid of honor and Elaine Collett and Cindi Casassa to be her bridesmaids. Louisa David will be her sister's junior bridesmaid.

Neil Newman will attend the bridegroom as best man. Joe Bendanato will join Mark's brothers, Tim and Jess, in ushering the wedding guests to their seats.

Man Arrested After Shooting in Pacifica

An argument between two men ended early Saturday when a third man was shot with a rifle, according to Pacifica police.

Steven Ransford, 22, of 77 Paloma Ave., Apt. 15, Pacifica, argued with an unidentified man shortly after midnight at the Linda Mar Rest Area in Pacifica, police report, until the man produced a chain and Ransford flashed a knife.

At that point, Ransford allegedly drove off and returned with a rifle, police said, then shot a bystander — not the man he had argued with.

Wounded in the chest was Robert Suffecool, 22, of 1129 Fassler Ave., Pacifica. He was admitted to Mary's Help Hospital in Daly City, where a hospital spokesman said he was in stable condition.

Pacifica police arrested Ransford and charged him with attempted murder after hearing friends in the area describe the incident.
